About the UPR Project at BCU:

Birmingham City University's Centre for Human Rights was created in 2014 to promote human rights, ensure access to justice, and enhance the rule of law around the world. We seek to achieve this through leading research, education, and consultancy. We submit expert reports to international human rights regions, provide advisory services to governments and nongovernmental organisations, and draft legal opinions and file legal briefs in domestic courts and international human rights courts.

The Centre for Human Rights established the UPR Project in 2018 as part of our consultancy service. We engage with the Human Rights Council's review process in offering support to the UPR Pre-sessions, providing capacity building for UPR stakeholders and National Human Rights Institutions, and the filing of stakeholder reports in selected sessions. The UPR Project is designed to help meet the challenges facing the safeguarding of human rights around the world, and to help ensure that UPR recommendations are translated into domestic legal change in member state parliaments. We fully support the UPR ethos of encouraging the sharing of best practice globally to protect everyone's human rights. The UPR Project at BCU engages with the UPR regularly as a stakeholder and is frequently cited by the OHCHR. INTRODUCTION

1. Benin is party to all nine core international human rights treaties for which it should be highly commended.¹ This includes the Convention on the Rights of the Child (CRC) and the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination Against Women (CEDAW) and in line with the Covenants' protection of minors, this Stakeholder Report focuses upon children's rights.
2. We make recommendations to the Government of Benin on this key issue, implementation of which would see Benin move towards achieving Sustainable Development Goals 4 and 5 which aim for "gender equality and empowering all women and girls" and "inclusive and equitable quality education and promote lifelong learning opportunities for all."
3. We urge the State to make practical commitments in the fourth cycle of the UPR for the advancement of children's rights, with particular reference to child, early and forced marriage. This includes giving full and practical consideration to all recommendations made by Member States, effectively implementing the recommendations Gabon accepts, and actively engaging with civil society throughout the process.

CHILD, EARLY AND FORCED MARRIAGE

A. Benin and International Law on Child, Early and Forced Marriage

4. Child and early marriage occurs before the age of 18 for one or both of the parties and it manifests in any formal marriage or informal union. Forced marriage can occur at any age when one and/or both parties have not provided their full and free consent to the union. A child marriage is therefore considered to be a form of forced marriage, as one and/or both parties are unable to provide their full, free and informed consent.² There are various acronyms to describe this human rights issue, but in this submission we adopt 'Child, Early and Forced Marriage' (CEFM).
5. CEFM is a human rights violation which deprives children of their agency to make decisions about their lives and future. It increases their vulnerability to various ills such as violence, discrimination, abuse, ill-health including sexual and reproductive health problems, and prevents their full participation in the economic, political and social spheres.³
6. Child marriage is prevalent in Benin, with girls disproportionately affected. Current national data indicates that 31% of women aged 20-24 years are married or in a union before the age of 18 which equates to 3 out of every 10 girls.⁴ A further one out of 10 are married before the age of 15.⁵

7. Articles 120 and 123 of the Persons and Family Code 2002 (Code des Personnes et de la Famille 2002)⁶ and Article 375 of the Child Code 2015 (Code de l'Enfant 2015)⁷ establish the legal minimum age of marriage as 18 years-old. However, minors can marry before 18 years with parental consent or in some cases judicial consent. A penalty of three to ten years imprisonment and a fine of 100,000 to 500,000 CFA francs is imposed on any person who subjects their child to CEFM.⁸ Furthermore, Article 181 of the Child Code also affirms that practices leading to CEFM “such as coercive measures, psychological pressure, blackmail affective and intense social and family pressure, are prohibited.”

International Law Prohibiting Child Marriage

8. The United Nations’ framework for addressing CEFM comprises a corpus of international human rights law and jurisprudence. Of particular relevance are Article 16 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights,⁹ Articles 1, 2, and 24 of CRC,¹⁰ Article 16 of CEDAW,¹¹ the Report of the Secretary General on CEFM,¹² and the Human Rights Committee decisions.¹³
9. Endorsing the worldwide legal age of marriage as 18-years-old, the Committee in its General Comment No. 20 (2016), on the implementation of the rights of the child during adolescence, reminds States parties of “the obligation to recognize that persons up to the age of 18 years are entitled to continuing protection from all forms of exploitation and abuse. It reaffirms that the minimum age limit should be 18 years for marriage.”¹⁴
10. Furthermore, a number of UN initiatives have identified CEFM as a human rights violation and that such practice should be outlawed worldwide. The Human Rights Council adopted the first UN resolution on CEFM in 2013¹⁵, and in 2015, it adopted its first substantive resolution on the issue wherein it requested the High Commissioner to organise an expert workshop on the impact of the existing strategies and initiatives.¹⁶ This led to a further Human Rights Council resolution being adopted in 2017,¹⁷ with the most recent iteration taking place on 7th October 2021.¹⁸ In 2020, the latest Report of the Secretary General on the issue of child, early and forced marriage was presented to the General Assembly.¹⁹
11. Considerable effort has also been made to address CEFM in regional treaties and charters in Africa. This includes Article 21 of the African Charter on the Rights and Welfare of the Child 1990,²⁰ Article 6 of the Protocol to the African Charter on Human and People’s Rights on the Rights of Women in Africa 2003,²¹ and the Commonwealth Kigali Declaration to prevent and eliminate child, early and forced marriage adopted in May 2015.²²

B. Implementation of Recommendations from Cycle Three in 2017

12. Benin received 198 recommendations in the Third Cycle of which 191 were accepted and 7 were noted.²³ A total of 68 recommendations were issued on rights of the child, of which 13 focused on CEFM. These were all supported by Benin which is commendable and indicates its commitment to restrict child marriage. Member States should ensure all key areas are being covered in Benin's fourth cycle of review in 2022.
13. Italy (para 118.129) recommended Benin "strengthen efforts to prevent and combat all forms of discrimination and violence against women and children, in particular, practices such as...child and early forced marriage." This was echoed in similar recommendations made by Burkina Faso (para 118.131), Tunisia (para 118.167), Central African Republic (para 118.169), Honduras (para 118.171), Korea (para 118.173), and Argentina (para 119.5). Spain (para 118.138) and United States (para 118.175) urged the State to strengthen awareness-raising campaigns on CEFM. These recommendations have been implemented.
14. The Ministry of Social Affairs, UNICEF Benin, and the First Lady Claudine Talon introduced the 'Zero Tolerance to Child Marriage' campaign in 2017.²⁴ The aim of the campaign is to eliminate CEFM by promoting social change and building a protective environment for children and their communities. The national youth platform 'Plateforme des Jeunes Synergie d'Action pour la Campagne Tolérance Zéro' has also played a crucial role in implementing the campaign through the production of songs ('Say no to child marriage'²⁵ and 'Let me grow up'²⁶), soap operas,²⁷ and dialogue between parents and children. Campaign activities have led to a number of accomplishments, including community dialogues on child marriage at the district level, discussions with religious leaders and the training of journalists on CEFM.²⁸
15. In May 2019, the Ministry of Social Affairs organised a workshop to take account of all of the activities that have been conducted since the inception of the Zero Tolerance campaign, in order to consider future actions that can substantially advance its aim to reduce and eradicate CEFM. It also wished to make various awareness-raising products, developed in the campaign, available to stakeholders. The Ministry urged all actors in its department to "remain available to carry out all the actions planned for the success of this campaign."²⁹
16. Other states focused on Benin's implementation of the Children's Code to help eliminate CEFM. These included Namibia (para 118.2), Brazil (para 118.19), and Switzerland (para 118.23). This has been not been implemented as CEFM continues to affect minors, especially those in rural areas.
17. Whilst such recommendations are welcomed, it is crucial that they remain specific and measurable in order to assess the level of implementation. Broad recommendations, whilst easy to accept, lack any impetus to bring about real change.³⁰ It is recommended that States adopt a SMART approach to recommendations as recognised by UPRinfo.³¹ Additionally, it would prove more beneficial if recommending States make reference to the review criteria which includes “human rights instruments to which a State is party”.³² For example reference to the CRC and/or CEDAW, a treaty the State under Review has ratified, would strengthen any CEFM recommendations.

C. Further Points for Benin to Consider

Adoption of a National Action Plan to End CEFM in Benin

18. Benin does not have a National Action Plan (NAP) in place to deal with CEFM. Taking inspiration from other African nations, such as Ghana and its National Strategic Framework on Ending Child Marriages³³ or Zambia and its National Strategy on Ending Child Marriage,³⁴ Benin should also implement a similar approach.
19. The adoption of a NAP can provide an integrated vision and clear direction to all sectors, at various levels, involved in addressing CEFM in Benin. The NAP should identify clear national goals, objectives, strategies and key interventions across these different sectors in order to help Benin adopt an incremental approach to the elimination of the practice.
20. Furthermore, a NAP will ensure effective coordination of the various initiatives to end child marriage. There is an increased need for collaboration, learning, and sharing of best practices amongst the different actors involved in preventing and responding to CEFM. This includes government, parliament, media, civil society, development partners and the private sector.
21. The introduction of a NAP to end CEFM can help guide all programmes and interventions at the national, regional, district and community levels whether implemented by Government or relevant stakeholders.

COVID-19 and the Increased Risk of CEFM

22. As a result of the COVID-19 pandemic, a further 10 million child marriages are projected globally before the end of the decade; unions that otherwise might have been prevented.³⁵ COVID-19 has exacerbated the risk of CEFM through five main routes:
 - (1) interrupted education;
 - (2) economic and food insecurity;
 - (3) disruptions to programmes and services;

- (4) adolescent pregnancy; and,
- (5) death of a parent or primary caretaker.

23. Furthermore, families tend to make decisions about education and marriage in parallel, hence school closures and suspension of educational services increase the risk of discontinuing education and promoting marriage instead. The pandemic has widened educational inequalities for vulnerable children and adolescents living in poor and/or remote rural areas as well as girls, refugees, those with disabilities, and those who are forcibly displaced.³⁶
24. Sexual and reproductive health services have also been disrupted which has a direct impact on adolescent pregnancy and marriage. A dangerous vacuum has been created as a result of curtailing awareness campaigns and community dialogues on the negative consequences of CEFM.³⁷

Impact of COVID-19 on Adolescent Girls and Gender Equality

25. Humanitarian crises and the deleterious impact of COVID-19 amplify and compound gender norms that hinder girls' school attendance, risk of child marriage, early pregnancy, gender-based violence, sexual exploitation and child labour. A girl is at risk of encountering violence in every sphere, including in the classroom, no matter where she may live.
26. Global figures indicate that in comparison to boys their age, girls between 5 and 14 years old spend 40 per cent more time on unpaid household chores and care work, which compromises their education and learning. As a result of COVID-19 school closures, girls may have increased exposure to sexual activity, sexual violence and unwanted pregnancy as they may spend more time at home and unsupervised. The loss of school time may also lead families to view girls' education as a less worthwhile investment. Unfortunately, a disproportionate number of girls will simply not return to education.³⁸
27. Economic fragility, loss of livelihood and an increase in household poverty may limit the ability of families to provide for their children. Economic and food insecurity tend to produce two reactions: reducing expenditure (such as education costs) and reducing the household size. Both can lead to child marriage. In addition, child marriage can benefit a household's income where the groom's family has to pay a form of bride wealth (known as 'lobola' in Southern Africa) to the bride's family.³⁹
28. According to UNFPA-UNICEF,
"The impact of the pandemic is likely to be felt for at least another decade, also raising the risk of child marriage for girls who are now young. Because marriage fundamentally alters the course of a girl's life, the full effect of the pandemic on human development will play out over a generation."⁴⁰

The Universal Periodic Review Recommendations and the Contribution to the Sustainable Development Goals

29. Benin should consider adopting the UPR recommendations as an expression of mutual reinforcement of the government's commitment to promoting the Sustainable Development Goals.⁴¹ The human rights values expressed in both the UPR and the SDGs can be woven together to promote policy coherence.
30. SDG 5 provides for "gender equality and empower[ing] all women and girls" but the practice of CEFM is inconsistent with this goal. Specifically, SDG Target 5.3 aims to eliminate all harmful practices such as child, early and forced marriages.⁴²
31. The Special Rapporteur on the sale and sexual exploitation of children has noted in her 2022 annual report that "child marriage is rooted in gender inequality and in the relatively low value accorded to girls, and is exacerbated by poverty, insecurity and conflict."⁴³ CEFM is therefore antithetical to female empowerment, gender equality and the fostering of human dignity of the people of Benin.

D. Recommendations

We recommend the government of Benin to:

- i. Prioritise the effective implementation of the Child Code.
- ii. Adopt a National Action Plan to End Child Marriage in Benin. This includes regular monitoring and tracking of progress against targets set under the Plan.
- iii. Adopt a COVID-19 response strategy that extends beyond health and prioritises the prevention and elimination of CEFM, paying particular attention to the impact of COVID-19 on vulnerable adolescents, girls, and women.
- iv. Empower girls and boys to be better able to prevent and respond to child marriage. For example, supporting existing adolescents' groups to offer safe spaces to discuss sensitive issues.
- v. Conduct, in consultation with relevant stakeholders, awareness raising and education programmes aimed at addressing the negative implications of CEFM and how to effectively address the issue. These should be targeted at community and religious leaders.
- vi. Develop a strategy for the dissemination of knowledge on CEFM, including awareness-building and mechanisms for reporting and obtaining assistance, by utilising mass media, community radio, and social media platforms. This is particularly important given the implications of COVID-19 on CEFM.

² In this submission we adopt the definitions of ‘child marriage,’ ‘early marriage,’ and ‘forced marriage,’ as provided by the OHCHR which identifies that:

- “child marriage” is a marriage in which at least one of the parties is a child. According to the Convention on the Rights of the Child, a child is “every human being below the age of eighteen unless under the law applicable to the child, majority is attained earlier (CRC art 1).
- “early marriage” is often used interchangeably with “child marriage” and refers to marriages involving a person below 18 in countries where the age of majority is attained earlier or upon marriage. Early marriage can also refer to marriages where both spouses are 18 or older but other factors make them unready to consent to marriage, such as their level of physical, emotional, sexual and psychosocial development, or a lack of information regarding the person’s life options.
- “forced marriage” is any marriage which occurs without the full and free consent of one or both of the parties and/or where one or both of the parties is/are unable to end or leave the marriage, including as a result of duress or intense social or family pressure.
