Corporal punishment of children in Bangladesh: Briefing for the Universal Periodic Review, 30th session, 2018

From the Global Initiative to End All Corporal Punishment of Children, September 2017

The legality and practice of corporal punishment of children violates their fundamental human rights to respect for human dignity and physical integrity and to equal protection under the law. Under international human rights law – the Convention on the Rights of the Child and other human rights instruments – states have an obligation to enact legislation to prohibit corporal punishment in all settings, including the home.

In Bangladesh, corporal punishment of children is lawful, despite repeated recommendations to prohibit it by the Committee on the Rights of the Child and during the 2nd cycle UPR of Bangladesh in 2013, as well as the Government’s commitment to prohibiting all corporal punishment.

We hope the Working Group will note with concern the legality of corporal punishment of children in Bangladesh. We hope states will raise the issue during the review in 2018 and make a specific recommendation that Bangladesh draft and enact legislation clearly prohibiting all corporal punishment of children, however light, in every setting of their lives, and repealing any legal defence to its use as a matter of urgency.

1 Review of Bangladesh in the 2nd cycle UPR (2013) and progress since

1.1 Bangladesh was reviewed in the second cycle of the Universal Periodic Review in 2013 (session 16). The issue of corporal punishment of children was raised in the compilation of UN information\(^1\) and the summary of stakeholders’ information.\(^2\) The Government received a recommendation to explicitly prohibit corporal punishment in all settings but did not give a clear answer, stating: “The Supreme Court of Bangladesh passed judgment in Writ Petition no. 5684/2010 prohibiting all forms of punishment in all primary and educational institutions. Accordingly, the Government has prohibited, by issuing a circular, all forms of corporal punishment in all educational institutions. The Government will continue to work towards raising awareness about the adverse effects of corporal punishment in all settings. However, prohibiting the same in all spheres needs extensive and proper educational and socio-cultural initiatives.”\(^3\)

1.2 Since the review in 2013, no progress has been made on the issue of corporal punishment. Despite the Government’s commitment, legislation prohibiting corporal punishment has not yet been enacted.

1.3 We hope the Working Group will note with concern the legality of corporal punishment of children in Bangladesh. We hope states will raise the issue during the review in 2018 and make a specific recommendation that Bangladesh draft and enact legislation clearly prohibiting all corporal punishment of children, however light, in every setting of their lives, and repealing any legal defence to its use as a matter of urgency.

2 Legality of corporal punishment in Bangladesh

Summary of current law and reforms needed to achieve prohibition

Corporal punishment of children in Bangladesh is lawful in the home, alternative care and day care settings, and in the penal system. It is unlawful in schools. Achieving prohibition would require the enactment of legislation clearly prohibiting the use of corporal punishment in all settings and repealing the legal defence to its use in article 89 of the Penal Code 1860.

2.1 Home (lawful): Article 89 of the Penal Code 1860 states: “Nothing which is done in good faith for the benefit of a person under twelve years of age, or of unsound mind by or by consent, either express or implied, of the guardian or other person having lawful charge of that person, is an offence by reason of any harm which it may cause, or be intended by the doer to cause or be known by the doer to be likely to cause to that person....” A 2011 Supreme Court ruling (see below) stated that this article is relevant only to medical actions on a child and not to corporal punishment. However, this has not been confirmed through law reform to explicitly prohibit all corporal punishment; it is notable that in other jurisdictions with comparable Penal Code provisions the article is interpreted as providing a defence for corporal punishment. Provisions against violence and abuse in the Penal Code and the Domestic Violence Act 2010 are not interpreted as prohibiting corporal punishment in childrearing.

2.2 In the 2011 ruling on corporal punishment in schools, the Supreme Court of Bangladesh High Court Division called for prohibition of corporal punishment in the home and directed the Government to consider amending the Children Act 1974 to make it an offence for parents (and employers) to impose corporal punishment on children. The Children Act 2013, which repeals the Children Act 1974, failed to achieve this. It includes the offence of child cruelty (art. 70) but it does not explicitly prohibit all corporal punishment.

2.3 Alternative care settings (lawful): Corporal punishment is lawful in alternative care settings under article 89 of the Penal Code 1860. Legislation governing care institutions reportedly provides for corporal punishment as a disciplinary measure but we have no specific details. The Children Act 2013 does not explicitly prohibit all corporal punishment.

2.4 Day care (lawful): Corporal punishment is lawful in day care under article 89 of the Penal Code 1860. It is not prohibited in the Children Act 2013.

2.5 Schools (unlawful): Corporal punishment is unlawful in schools according to a Supreme Court judgment issued on 13 January 2011 which stated that it violated the Constitutional prohibition of torture and cruel, inhuman or degrading punishment or treatment. The judgment followed a writ petition filed in July 2010 by Bangladesh Legal Aid and Services Trust and Ain o Salish Kendra with the High Court in Dhaka, as a result of which the Ministry of Education published a circular stating that corporal punishment is prohibited in schools, that it constitutes misconduct and that measures will be taken against perpetrators under the Penal Code, the Children Act and through departmental action. The Ministry issued “Guidelines for the prohibition of corporal and mental punishment of students in educational institutions 2011”, which came into effect in April 2011. Prohibition is yet to be confirmed in legislation passed by Parliament: a draft Education Act has long been under discussion but as at June 2016 had still not been enacted.

2.6 Penal institutions (lawful): Corporal punishment is lawful as a disciplinary measure in penal institutions, including certified institutes, approved homes, prisons and vagrant homes. Rule No. 24 of the Children Rules 1976 lists sanctions for infringements of discipline, including “caning not exceeding ten stripes”. The Prisons Act 1894 authorises whipping as a punishment for breaches of discipline by male prisoners, up to 30 stripes (art. 46); for boys under 16 it must be inflicted “in the way of school discipline” (art. 53). According to the Borstal Schools Act (art. 4), the Prisons Act applies to borstal schools. The Children Act 2013 does not prohibit corporal punishment.

2.7 Sentence for crime (lawful): Whipping appears to be lawful as a sentence for crime for males. Under the Code of Criminal Procedure 1898, boys under 16 may be whipped up to 15 “stripes”, older males up to 30 stripes (art. 392). The Penal Code 1860 does not provide for judicial whipping, but under the Whipping Act 1909 whipping may be given in lieu of or in addition to the punishments specified in the Penal Code for specific offences committed by persons over 16 (arts. 3 and 4). The Act provides for juvenile offenders (under 16) to be whipped in lieu of other punishments for a wider range of crimes under the Penal Code and other laws (art. 5). Whipping is a sentence for offences under the Cantonments Pure Food Act 1966 (art. 23), the Suppression of Immoral Traffic Act 1933 (arts. 9, 10 and 12) and, for boys under the age of 12, the Railways Act 1890 (art. 130).

2.8 The 2011 Supreme Court judgment stated that all laws authorising whipping or caning of children as a sentence of the courts should be immediately repealed. The Children Act 2013 states that the dignity of children in conflict with the law should be respected at all times (art. 54) and does not provide for judicial corporal punishment – but it does not explicitly prohibit corporal punishment as a sentence nor repeal the above mentioned provisions authorising judicial whipping of juvenile offenders. We are seeking information regarding the extent to which the new Act overrides other laws. The Constitution protects persons who have been arrested or detained from torture, cruel, degrading and inhuman treatment but states that this provision “shall not affect the operation of any existing law which prescribes any punishment or procedure for trial” (art. 35).
2.9 Corporal punishment is also commonly ordered by traditional village mediation councils (shalish), particularly against girls and women. Punishments include caning, whipping, beating and stoning to death, and are often issued as fatwas under Shari’a law. The practice continues, despite a High Court ruling in July 2010 declaring all kinds of extra-judicial punishment unlawful and observing that cruel punishments at shalish are unconstitutional; a ruling in October 2010 declared that Bangladesh is a secular state, again confirming the issuing of fatwas as unlawful.10

3 Bangladesh’s commitment to prohibiting all corporal punishment and progress since

3.1 At a meeting of the South Asia Forum in July 2006, following on from the regional consultation in 2005 of the UN Secretary General’s Study on Violence against Children, the Government made a commitment to prohibition in all settings, including the home. In its written replies to questions from the Committee on the Rights of the Child in 2009, the Government identified “protection of children from corporal punishment at home, schools and institutions” as a priority. In 2010, Government representatives in SAIEVAC (South Asia Initiative to End Violence Against Children) developed a national action plan to achieve prohibition and in 2011 endorsed a report on progress towards prohibiting corporal punishment in South Asia states which included an analysis of the reforms required in Bangladesh.11 The Ministry of Women and Children Affairs is involved in SAIEVAC activities aimed at prohibiting corporal punishment in all settings.

3.2 In reporting to the Committee on the Rights of the Child in 2015, the Government noted that a number of legislative measures are still being developed, including a “Ban on Corporal Punishment Policy and Guideline 2015” and the Children Rules 2015.12 The Government also reported that a law to ban corporal punishment of children in all educational institutions and workplaces is being drafted, as well as a comprehensive law to ban all forms of violence against children, including corporal punishment.13 Consultations have been carried out in Dhaka, Chittagong and Patuakhali districts on amendments necessary to existing laws on violence against children and recommendation submitted to the Ministry of Law, Justice and Parliamentary Affairs in March 2014.14

4 Recommendations by human rights treaty bodies

4.1 CRC: Bangladesh has received repeated recommendations concerning prohibition and elimination of corporal punishment of children from the Committee on the Rights of the Child (2015, 2009, 2003, and 1997).15
