119.146. Continue advancing in the development and implementation of the “Stork Network” and the national system for registration, monitoring and accompanying for pregnant women in order to prevent maternal mortality, in the context of the policy for integral assistance to woman’s health (Colombia); Source of position: A/HRC/21/11 - Para. 119 & A/HRC/21/11/Add.1 - Para. 27	Supported	24 Right to health - General Affected persons: - general	Although Brazil has taken measures to broaden women’s access to natal and obstetric care, its Rede Cegonha (Stork Network programme) is principally focused on the healthcare needs of women who have decided to carry their pregnancies to term, i.e., women who have chosen to have children. Rede Cegonha entirely fails to address the healthcare needs of women wishing to terminate their pregnancies. This has real and adverse implications for the quality and extent of women’s maternal healthcare, since it leads to at least a significant reduction of, and in some cases the effective denial of, women’s reproductive health rights. For example: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> (i) there are limited public education programmes and limited access to information about family planning options, and public authorities such as hospitals do not provide facilities and appropriate prenatal care to enable women to exercise their reproductive rights; (ii) public authorities provide little or no information regarding abortion, even when it would be lawful such as where a woman has been raped; and, (iii) women seeking abortions are often forced to wait long hours before a dilatation and curettage. In addition, although Brazil has reduced its overall average maternal mortality ratio, it has not provided information on whether it has reduced the maternal mortality rates in the rural and poorer areas of Brazil that have historically had the highest maternal mortality ratio.

In the rural north and north-east regions, for example, there are only two doctors per 1,000 people. Further, as stated above, Brazil has not provided information on whether it has reduced the maternal mortality rates in the rural and poorer areas of Brazil that have historically had the highest maternal mortality ratio.

The Brazilian State provides access to health services in the cases of termination of pregnancy allowed by the legislation and by decision of the Supreme Court.	Supported/Noted	24 Right to health - General 29.1 Discrimination against women Affected persons: - general - women	Brazil has failed to implement a review of legislation criminalizing abortion. Brazil continues to criminalise abortion save in limited circumstances where: it is necessary to save the life of the mother; the pregnancy is the result of rape; and, where abortion is performed in respect of an anencephalic foetus. In addition, Brazil has maintained its stance against abortion and reproductive rights even in the face of the outbreak of the Zika virus . Further, instead of expanding the possibilities of accessing voluntary pregnancy termination, conservative lawmakers have instead become increasingly emboldened in proposing laws that have the effect of further restriction abortion rights: for example, the Estatuto do Nascituro (Statute of the Foetus) which remains under consideration by the Brazilian Congress.
