Universal periodical review

Third cycle

FORMER YUGOSLAV REPUBLIC OF MACEDONIA

Right to life and related human rights issues

12th of July 2018

“From the politics of taking life to the politics of affirming it”
The Center for Global Nonkilling (CGNK) has a unique mission, that is both inspirational for individuals and transformative for societies:

“To promote change towards the measurable goal of a killing-free world by means open to infinite human creativity in reverence for life”.

CGNK was founded by Glenn Paige (1929-2017), political science Professor and author of the book “Nonkilling Political Science”, translated in numerous languages. The Center is a worldwide congregation of persons, scholars and others, working at creating societies that do not kill. Valuing life in all its worthwhile dimensions is a necessary mission; please join the Center for Global Nonkilling in celebrating, enhancing and protecting life. The Center has ECOSOC special consultative status since 2014. At each UPR session, CGNK makes usually one main submission looking at all or many aspects of the right to life and a few shorter ones focusing on specific or salient issues.

The right to life
All human rights are universal, of equal importance, indivisible, interconnected and mutually reinforcing. They arise out of human nature and are needed for individual fulfillment as to build lasting and prosperous, thriving and humanist societies. They are universal values, moral and legal values. They are complemented by universal and fundamental methods such as, inter alia, exemplarity, prevention and precaution, peaceful settlements of disputes and non-violence. These methods are needed for the full respect, implementation and common enjoyment of all human rights.

Compared to other human rights, the right to life has four specific features:

a. If dignity can be said to be the paramount human right as it is present when each and all human rights are fulfilled, so can is the right to life present within all other human rights. Yet it can also be said that the right to life precedes all human rights: if life is taken all human rights are cancelled. Conversely and more joyfully, granting and giving solid ground to the right to life – as to the quality of life – is the base needed for the peaceful progress and the proactive fulfillment, for the completion of all human rights.

b. There are no possible limitations or restrictions to life and the right to life: one is either alive or not. Issues pertaining to the beginning and the end of life such as reproductive rights, abortion, suicides and euthanasia, as well as prenatal and genetic engineering should thus be dealt in a preventive, humane and human sustainable manner, for each and all, in full dignity.

c. There is only one way to guarantee respect of, to protect the right to life: prevention. Once a life is lost, compensation may be due, but there are no possible direct reparations for a life lost.

d. Henceforth, the right to life is also the duty not to kill. As such, the right to life is a fully reciprocal right, granted to all, but also in need of being granted to all by all.
"We understand the right to life as being the right not to be killed, but also as everyone’s responsibility not to kill others”.

The Center for Global Nonkilling recognises no right to kill. Though not rights, three powers to kill have sometimes been granted or legally been recognized or organized:

1) The use of legitimate defence – as legally required: by a proportionate reaction linked to a direct, serious and imminent threat, requirements to which we add: by using nonviolent means – should never result in acts of killing or maiming. Nevertheless, whatever the result of legitimate defence may be, an independent judicial control over it is part of the rule of law. Similarly, because it highly impacts on the right to life, any use of force by officials or any one, as it impedes on the rights to security and integrity, should be avoided or highly limited. Outmost attention is to be given to prevent situations which may thereupon result in loss or losses of lives or in any type of maiming. Again, any official use of force should be monitored by an independent mechanism.

2) Death penalty, if it was ever permissible, is however a major and definitive breach of the right to life and of numerous other human rights. More often than not, it is considered an inhumane, cruel and degrading treatment. It is a poor example of respect for the right to life and thus, unworthy and lacking the necessary dignity, the exemplarity required of any authoritative power or institutions. As we are to universally preserve our species and life on Earth, so shall we therefore protect all members of our species. Death penalty is to be abolished.

3) Powers of war, as conceded by humanitarian law, permit as an exception to the right to life, under certain circumstances only, the taking of the life of enemy soldiers. Seeing peace and respect of life prevail – always – and thus nullifying this exception is one of the objectives of the Center for Global Nonkilling.

Other human rights
All human rights are needed to fulfil a safe and happy life. However, some of them may be of more direct importance either for the full realisation of the right to life or to avoid its breaches. The links between human rights and peace are progressively being developed. The Center for Global Nonkilling attaches a special importance to the human right to peace as human rights can only progress and be coordinated, be reciprocally fulfilled in a peaceful environment. Furthermore, peace and peaceful methods provide means to solve conflicts (including between competing human rights) without aggravating them and, as may be, to the advantage of all persons and institutions concerned, in a constructive or reconstructive way. Conflicts solved peacefully make it easier to alleviate feelings with respect, to draw lessons learned from difficult situations and to design policies for future prevention and overcoming.

It is with regret that we note that the Republic of North Macedonia has not supported the adoption of the declaration on the right to peace and we will be happy to know how the country will be implementig the declaration in public policies, both locally and internationally. The right to participation, including of women, youth and disabled, is highly important. The more people take responsibility for their lives, the more they will respect the lives of others as of all.
Further, the more people participate to the decision making processes, the easier it will be to achieve the Sustainable Development Goals (SDG).

The right to accurate standards of living, including the rights to food, water and sanitation, clothing and housing, to rights to work and social security deserve full attention too, in all circumstances. The right to health is an essential right for the fulfilment of the right to life and of the subsequent right to longevity. The human right to a healthy natural environment, thus sustaining humanity and life on Earth, deserves accurate protection and attention. It must be, as often as need be, recalled that it is needed to achieve societies in which all human rights are all equally shared. Finally, the right to happiness or to fulfilment in reverence for life should be mentioned as “happy people breed a happy world”.

A. International human rights constitution.

The following legal obligations – the convention on the prevention and punishment of the crime of genocide, the covenant on civil and political rights and its optional protocol on the abolition of the death penalty and the convention on enforced disappearances – are within the human rights constitution (the basic international human rights treaties) the ones mostly concerned with the right to life. They are the minimum international standards needed for any country to show full legal respect for life and for the right to life.

Beyond legal aspects, it is the bounty and the worth of life, ethics and sufficient living standards for all, knowledge and best practices that all give a future and a meaning to the lives we lead and live, for ourselves as for a sustainable civilization, for future generations.

Illegality of enforced disappearances

To be granted a life is also receiving a right to a presence; to a public presence before the law and to a private presence, an acknowledgeable presence with, for and from one’s kin.

Enforced disappearances violate numerous human rights, be them in treaties or in customary law. Nevertheless, the convention on enforced disappearances reinforces the protection against disappearances.

There is an unanswered country visit request made to authorities of the Republic of North Macedonia by Working Group on Enforced or Involuntary Disappearances.

Henceforth, we hereby recommend to the Republic of North Macedonia to ratify the signed Convention on enforced disappearances and to accept a country visit by the working group.

Welcoming the delegation of Republic of North Macedonia to Geneva, we wish to them and to all the people of Republic of North Macedonia a constructive and fulfilling Universal Periodic Review.
Though we use the presently used name for Macedonia in our title, we hereafter stand with the new name of the Republic of North Macedonia, complementing the concerned authorities for solving the dispute, though aware that at the time of writing the process is not yet totally completed. We do so not inasmuch as being in favour of a solution or of a name versus another, but to support the peace process it implies. May the cause progress for the good of all!

1 http://nonkilling.org/center/publications-media/books-translations
2 http://nonkilling.org/center/how-to-help
3 For more comprehensive submissions, see the ones recently done for the UPR's of Iceland, Switzerland, South Korea, the UK or recently Mauritius. Such submissions look at all legal aspects of the right to life and at many practical aspects of a fulfilling and lasting life, including in relation with the Sustainable Development Goals. Statistics are used therein to uphold the Universal Periodic Review process regarding the fulfilment of life from conception until death, including inter alia reproductive rights and abortions, birth registrations, child and mother's mortality, suicides of all sorts and homicides, traffic, work and leisure casualties and life expectancy. Other topics such deaths in custody, minimal standards of living and other applications of the right to life may be added as accurate for the enhancement, the enjoyment and the protection of life, and of the right to life. Rights to health, minimum standards of living, a healthy environment and peace, all deeply related to the right to life, are studied as needed or according to available means.
4 The Human Rights Committee, in its draft comment 36 (2015) on the right to life describes it this way: “It is the supreme right from which no derogation is permitted. The right to life has profound importance both for individuals and for society as a whole. It is most precious for its own sake, but also serves as a basic right, facilitating the enjoyment of all other human rights”.
5 The Constitution of the local canton (federated state) of Geneva (2012), article 184.3 reads: “In all conflictive situations, use of force should be avoided or limited. Concerned persons shall concur” (translation by the author).
6 See i.e. the 9th meeting of the 34th session of the Human Rights Council.
7 See 3rd meeting of the 34th session of the Human Rights Council on mainstreaming human rights on the contribution of human rights to peacebuilding; resolutions 2250 on youth and peace of the Security Council, the common resolution of the General Assembly and the Security Council (2282) on Sustaining peace. Or the 13th of June 2016 appeal by Switzerland and 70 States, the Declaration on the Right to Peace A/RES/71/189.
8 Universal Declaration of Human Rights, article 28: “Everyone is entitled to a social and international order in which the rights and freedoms set forth in this Declaration can be fully realized”.
10 https://digitallibrary.un.org/record/855187