Introduction

1. The Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review, established in accordance with Human Rights Council resolution 5/1, held its twenty-seventh session from 1 to 12 May 2017. The review of the Philippines was held at the 11th meeting, on 8 May 2017. The delegation of the Philippines was headed by the Senior Deputy Executive Secretary in the Office of the President, Menardo I. Guevarra, and the Chair of the Foreign Relations Committee, Senate of the Philippines, Alan Peter S. Cayetano. At its 17th meeting, held on 11 May 2017, the Working Group adopted the report on the Philippines.
2. On 13 February 2017, the Human Rights Council selected the following group of rapporteurs (troika) to facilitate the review of the Philippines: Kenya, Paraguay and Switzerland.
3. In accordance with paragraph 15 of the annex to Human Rights Council resolution 5/1 and paragraph 5 of the annex to Council resolution 16/21, the following documents were issued for the review of the Philippines:
 - (a) A national report submitted/written presentation made in accordance with paragraph 15 (a) (A/HRC/WG.6/27/PHL/1);
 - (b) A compilation prepared by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) in accordance with paragraph 15 (b) (A/HRC/WG.6/27/PHL/2);
 - (c) A summary prepared by OHCHR in accordance with paragraph 15 (c) (A/HRC/WG.6/27/PHL/3).
4. A list of questions prepared in advance by Belgium, Czechia, Germany, Mexico, the Netherlands, Norway, Slovenia, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and the United States of America was transmitted to the Philippines through the troika. These questions are available on the extranet of the universal periodic review.

I. Summary of the proceedings of the review process

A. Presentation by the State under review

5. The delegation stated that Filipinos believed that people were created in the image of God and that there could be no compromise on human rights and dignity. Filipinos also believed in accountability.
6. The President of the Philippines, Rodrigo Duterte, was at the helm of the Government because the people had demanded real change. Filipinos longed for the rule of law, equality and respect for the human rights of all people regardless of faith, social status, sexual orientation, age, disability or ethnicity, or of whether they were from urban or rural areas.
7. The Government was committed to meeting its obligations arising from the treaties it had ratified and to integrating a human rights agenda into its development initiatives. Guided by the Philippine Development Plan for 2017-2022, the Government had adopted a culture- and gender-sensitive paradigm and a human rights-based approach to public service. A campaign against illegal drugs was being pursued to preserve lives and to prevent the country from turning into a narco-State. At all times, the Government upheld the rule of law and President Duterte had adopted a policy of zero tolerance for abuse by law enforcers. The Government had adopted a holistic and balanced approach to addressing crime and illegal drugs. In addition to strengthening law enforcement and judicial mechanisms, it encouraged private sector participation to ensure more effective and sustainable rehabilitation and reintegration programmes for drug users who wished to stop using.

8. The situation of illegal drugs could only be understood by recognizing the relationship between illegal drugs, violent crime and poverty. The violence was associated with drug lords and drug suppliers. In respect of the government campaign against illegal drugs, “alternate facts” were being spread by critics and widely quoted by the media. The delegation sought to correct those “facts” by stating the following. Firstly, those critics had changed the definition of extrajudicial killings, thereby deceiving the public and the media into believing that there had been a sudden wave of State-sponsored extrajudicial killings. There had been a deliberate attempt to include all homicides related to the campaign against illegal drugs as extrajudicial killings and to say that they were State-sponsored, which was not true. Secondly, the 1.266 million drug pushers and users who had surrendered were being rehabilitated. Thirdly, during the six-year period prior to the Duterte administration, 93,197 drug operations had been conducted while barely 10 months into the Duterte administration, 53,503 such operations had been conducted. Fourthly, 64,917 drug-related arrests had been made. Fifthly, of the 9,432 homicide cases, 2,692 deaths had resulted from presumed legitimate law enforcement operations. While the increase in police operations had resulted in more people surrendering, there were also people who violently resisted arrest, which in turn led to more deaths. Although deaths arising from law enforcement operations were presumed to be legitimate, they were automatically investigated.

9. The Duterte administration had doubled the budget of the Commission on Human Rights. President Duterte had institutionalized Executive Order No. 2, also known as the “Freedom of information order”, something no other Philippine president had done, and installed a direct telephone line to the Office of the President for complaints from citizens.

10. The Government was in the process of drafting its human rights action plan for the next five years. A human rights-based approach to development would be implemented.

11. The Government supported the universal periodic review mechanism and the United Nations human rights system. A decision on which recommendations to accept would be taken against the backdrop of national challenges.

12. The universal periodic review was effective because the Human Rights Council had been successful in insulating it from polarization. While the special procedures of the Council were often effective, they sometimes did more harm than good. The delegation referred to a tweet by the Special Rapporteur on extrajudicial, summary or arbitrary executions, Agnes Callamard, which suggested she was impartial and unfair. Invitations to special rapporteurs would be extended at an appropriate time, provided they proved their independence and willingness to engage in a constructive manner.

13. The Philippines was addressing a communist rebellion, unrest, a rebellion in the south, inequality and social injustice, control of the economy by the political elite and criminal and drug syndicates that acted with impunity. Terrorism was a national, regional and international threat.

B. Interactive dialogue and responses by the State under review

14. During the interactive dialogue, 95 delegations made statements. Recommendations made during the dialogue are to be found in section II of the present report.

15. Viet Nam welcomed the recent ratification of the Convention against Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children, of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN).

16. Yemen noted that the Philippines had signed the Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment and implemented human rights programmes for police officers and on the eradication of poverty.

17. Zambia welcomed the acceptance of several recommendations from the first and second cycles of the universal periodic review but noted that most of the recommendations had not been implemented.

18. Algeria appreciated the plans to improve the living standards of the population, particularly of women and children from poor families.
19. Angola noted the progress made through the adoption of laws to fulfil the obligations under the Convention on the Rights of the Child.
20. Argentina congratulated the Philippines for adopting the Philippine Development Plan for 2017-2022, especially the section on the rights of women.
21. Australia expressed concern at reports of extrajudicial killings associated with the war on drugs and the involvement of the national police.
22. Austria commended the Philippines for the measures on modern family planning and poverty reduction but expressed concern at plans to reintroduce the death penalty and the increase in extrajudicial killings.
23. Azerbaijan recognized the progress made in protecting vulnerable groups, combating trafficking in human beings and ensuring the rule of law.
24. Bangladesh noted the 10-point socioeconomic agenda aimed at combating poverty, efforts to protect vulnerable groups, support to education, the programme against child labour and policies to combat human trafficking.
25. Belarus commended the Philippines for the measures implemented to guarantee socioeconomic rights, including the development of social support, and to combat human trafficking.
26. Belgium commended the Government for creating a monitoring, reporting and response system for children affected by armed conflict and for further defining responsibilities of government agencies responding to violations against children.
27. Bosnia and Herzegovina noted the Government's focus on improving the protection of civil and political rights, as well as economic, social and cultural rights. It welcomed the efforts made in relation to women's rights.
28. Botswana noted the commitment to promoting human rights but was concerned by reports of extrajudicial killings, enforced disappearances and heightened campaigns against illegal drug-related activities resulting in deaths.
29. Brazil welcomed efforts to prohibit discrimination based on sexual orientation and gender identity but was concerned about the alleged number of disappearances and extrajudicial killings.
30. Brunei Darussalam noted efforts to expand access to quality education through the enactment of several laws and progress in the empowerment of women and promotion of gender equality.
31. Bulgaria commended the Philippines for its efforts to reduce poverty and appreciated its accession to the Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture.
32. Cambodia welcomed the implementation of most of the accepted recommendations from previous reviews. It commended the 10-point socioeconomic agenda aimed at poverty reduction.
33. Canada urged the Philippines to dismantle and disarm paramilitary groups, to stop the militarization of the ancestral lands of indigenous peoples and improve access by indigenous peoples to health and social services.
34. Chad highlighted the Philippine Development Plan for 2017-2022, which advocated the use of a human rights approach in the public sector, in the allocation of funds for poverty reduction and in social services programmes.
35. Chile welcomed the progress made in the ratification of international human rights instruments. It was however concerned about the persistence of extrajudicial executions and enforced disappearances.
36. China expressed support for the campaign against illegal drugs.

37. Costa Rica was concerned about the war on drugs, as it incited extrajudicial executions, enforced disappearances and torture.
38. Croatia encouraged a more proactive approach that linked the principle of the rule of law to the socioeconomic development agenda in order to achieve a more comprehensive integration of human rights norms.
39. Cuba highlighted the existence of a human rights commission with a mandate to investigate human rights violations, as well as the work of the commission on women to counter discrimination against women.
40. Czechia acknowledged the efforts and accomplishments in closing the gender gap.
41. Denmark expressed concern about the fact that some recent initiatives to combat crime, including the war on drugs, might lead to impunity and violations of human rights. It also expressed concern about the high number of attacks on human rights defenders.
42. Ecuador praised the actions taken to protect domestic workers, including the joint operations handbook, and the commitments to protect the environment through a national plan and specific laws.
43. Egypt urged the Philippines to uphold international human rights norms in the context of the war on drugs. It noted the peace plan between the Government and the Moro Islamic Liberation Front.
44. Estonia noted the efforts made by the Philippines to meet its human rights obligations since its previous review.
45. France raised concerns regarding the proliferation of extrajudicial executions and inquired about the national surveillance mechanisms that existed in that area.
46. Georgia called on the Philippines to refrain from restoring the death penalty and to issue a standing invitation to the special procedure mandate holders.
47. Germany expressed deep concern about reports of human rights violations in the context of the so-called war on drugs.
48. Ghana stated that, despite the acceptance by the Philippines of 11 recommendations on putting an end to extrajudicial killings and strengthening accountability for those crimes at the previous review, such killings remained widespread.
49. Guatemala acknowledged the accession by the Philippines to the Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture. It expressed concern at reports that the Government's campaign against drugs had resulted in the persecution and killing of drug users and drug traffickers.
50. Haiti welcomed the success of the economic programmes in the Philippines.
51. The Holy See referred to reports of trafficking in Philippine men, women and children for labour exploitation. It also expressed concern about extrajudicial killings and enforced disappearances.
52. Honduras highlighted the progress made in the areas of social inclusion, participation of women in decision-making and youth education.
53. Hungary expressed concern about the fact that since President Duterte had taken office and announced a campaign targeting those allegedly involved in drug-related activities, over 7,000 people had been killed by the police and unknown individuals. It also referred to the threats faced by human rights defenders.
54. Iceland expressed alarm over the high rate of killings since the election of President Duterte and referred to the allegations of enforced disappearances, torture and other ill-treatment by police officers.
55. Indonesia commended the Philippines for completing the human resources road map for 2016-2022, the significant budget allocated to public education and the commitment to fighting human trafficking.

56. Iraq praised the Philippines for its national report and commended it for the reproductive rights act and the recovery care provided in the fight against drugs.
57. Ireland appreciated the commitment to human rights but shared its deep concern at the marked deterioration in the rule of law since the previous review.
58. Italy welcomed and encouraged further efforts in the field of human rights.
59. Japan noted social problems involving violence against women. It offered its support for the development of drug treatment facilities and the formulation of treatment programmes.
60. Kenya commended the Philippines for the steps taken since its first and second reviews and urged it to continue to implement the remaining recommendations.
61. The Lao People's Democratic Republic commended the Philippines for taking measures to implement the recommendations arising from previous reviews and welcomed the progresses made in protecting the rights of women.
62. In response to questions and comments, the delegation of the Philippines stated that, pursuant to Administrative Order No. 163, non-governmental and civil society organizations had been encouraged to join the efforts of the Government in promoting compliance with human rights obligations. Human rights defenders participated in congressional hearings on the enactment of laws that affected human rights and the enactment of a law defining their rights was under review.
63. The Government respected the independence of the Commission on Human Rights. The President appointed the members of the Commission through a selection process that gave weight to endorsements mostly from non-governmental organizations. The budget of the Commission for 2016-2017 had almost doubled.
64. The Government had established an inter-agency committee to resolve cases of enforced disappearances, torture and other grave violations of the rights to life, liberty and security of person. According to the national definition, extrajudicial killings only involved victims who were members of cause-oriented advocacy groups. Crimes falling outside that definition were treated as regular crimes.
65. An inter-agency committee addressed trafficking in persons, including involuntary servitude. The ASEAN Convention against Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children, had been ratified in 2017 and a "child protection compact" had been concluded with a third country to advance the campaign against trafficking in children.
66. Individuals meeting the required criteria continued to avail themselves of the Witness Protection, Security and Benefit Programme.
67. The protection and welfare of vulnerable and marginalized groups such as indigenous peoples, persons with disabilities, women, children and older persons were at the top of the administration's agenda and a package of laws addressing their various needs was being considered.
68. Since the previous review, a number of laws had been enacted, including a foster care act and a law mandating emergency relief and protection for children before, during and after disasters and emergencies. The Universal Health Care Act and the Sin Tax Reform Law had been strengthened.
69. Measures ensuring the equal rights of wives in relation to property, among other issues, were pending. An executive order had been issued to fully implement the reproductive health law. Progress had been made in implementing the Responsible Parenthood and Reproductive Health Programme and there had been a significant increase in the national contraception prevalence rate and in the provision of free and lifelong antiretroviral therapy for pregnant and breastfeeding women with HIV.
70. The police had implemented an internal mechanism to ensure that personnel responsible for human rights violations such as torture were disciplined. The doctrine of command responsibility had been introduced. Proper procedures were being observed to ensure that torture was not used to extract confessions during investigations.

71. Prison congestion was being addressed through various measures, including a paralegal programme.
72. A specific law prohibiting discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation was being pursued. However, there were statutes, local government ordinances and jurisprudence that addressed discrimination and hate crimes, including on the grounds of sexual orientation and gender identity.
73. The Kindergarten Education Act and the Enhanced Basic Education Act had led to an increase in enrolment among indigenous peoples and a decline in the dropout rate. Also, an increase in the budget for basic education reform had increased enrolment among working learners and marginalized children.
74. Latvia encouraged the Philippines to use the expertise of the special procedures and expressed concern about the rising death toll from extrajudicial executions owing to the war on drugs.
75. Lebanon welcomed the campaign against drugs, which had had positive effects on the level of crime.
76. Libya appreciated the efforts made to combat corruption, crime and illegal drug use and the determination of the Philippines to address the challenges of poverty reduction and implement policies and programmes for sustainable development.
77. Liechtenstein expressed concern at the proposal to reinstate the death penalty and at the persistence of appalling conditions of detention.
78. Lithuania acknowledged the positive steps taken to strengthen human rights standards but expressed concern about the extrajudicial killings and the intention to reinstate the death penalty.
79. Luxembourg expressed concern about the human rights situation, particularly about the extrajudicial executions within the framework of the fight against drugs and the allegations of torture of civilians.
80. Malaysia commended the Philippines for its human rights achievements and, as a fellow ASEAN member, recognized the significant role of the Philippines in the pursuit of a common human rights agenda in the region.
81. The Maldives was encouraged by the efforts to promote gender equality and recognized the efforts made by the Philippines to ensure a better quality of education.
82. Mexico hailed the political peace agreement in Mindanao, the actions to assist displaced people and the enactment of the Responsible Parenthood and Reproductive Health Act.
83. Montenegro noted the efforts to protect children's rights but regretted that a high number of children were engaged in child labour. It expressed concern at the extrajudicial killings of suspected drugs dealers.
84. Morocco commended the Philippines for initiatives to promote socioeconomic rights through poverty reduction programmes, improve access to education and promote employment, as well as for its action to combat human trafficking.
85. Mozambique noted with appreciation the implementation of the 10-point socioeconomic agenda, which had led to a drastic reduction in poverty, and commended the progress achieved on gender equality.
86. Myanmar stated that the response to the threat posed by illegal drug use should be left to the Government and took positive note of recent measures with regard to the environment.
87. Nepal welcomed the initiatives to further promote the rights to health and education and noted efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labour, combat human trafficking and protect the rights of migrant workers.

88. The Netherlands commended the Philippines for the impressive measures taken in the fight against online sexual exploitation and human trafficking. It expressed concern about the high number of extrajudicial executions.
89. New Zealand commended the Philippines for ratifying the Second Optional Protocol to the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, aiming at the abolition of the death penalty, and for enacting the Responsible Parenthood and Reproductive Health Act.
90. Norway appreciated the efforts and commitment to work for peace and encouraged continuation of reforms to strengthen workers' rights and combat corruption.
91. Pakistan appreciated the creation of the National Anti-Environmental Crime Task Force and the implementation of poverty reduction programmes, the Sustainable Livelihood Programme and a comprehensive and integrated social services programme.
92. Peru acknowledged the progress made in the areas of health, education and housing. It noted the commitment to sustainable development.
93. Poland welcomed the adoption of the Children's Emergency Protection and Relief Act, which aimed to facilitate the reunification of separated children and the training of emergency responders in child protection.
94. Portugal was concerned about plans to restore the death penalty more than a decade after it had been abolished and about the ongoing anti-drug campaign.
95. Qatar noted the progress made, particularly in relation to economic, social and cultural rights, and appreciated the development action plan, as it took a holistic approach to development on the basis of human rights.
96. The Republic of Korea noted concerns about the current situation of civil and political rights and stated that human rights should be respected at all times.
97. The Republic of Moldova encouraged the Philippines to place the protection of the fundamental rights of all persons at the core of every policy and action. It was concerned about initiatives to reinstate capital punishment.
98. Romania stated that the implementation of supported recommendations from the previous review demonstrated a commitment to human rights. It commended the Philippines for its human rights-based campaign to eliminate the drug menace.
99. The Russian Federation commended the Philippines for enacting legislation in the areas of health care, education and labour, and welcomed the working quota for persons with disabilities and the Philippine Development Plan for 2017-2022.
100. Saudi Arabia commended the Philippines for its poverty alleviation strategy and relative plan, from which about 4 million poor households benefited.
101. Sierra Leone commended the Philippines for sustained efforts aimed at improving the lives of its peoples, including the Sustainable Livelihood Programme. It noted efforts to address the rights of women, including through the Magna Carta of Women.
102. Slovakia noted that various human rights laws related to recommendations arising from the previous review had been passed. It was concerned about reported initiatives to reinstate capital punishment.
103. Slovenia was concerned about reports on enforced disappearance and extrajudicial killings in the name of the war against drugs and reminded the Philippines of its commitments under international human rights law.
104. Spain welcomed the mechanism established by the Commission on Human Rights to address human rights complaints, as well as the legislation on protecting children in emergency situations.
105. Sri Lanka noted the policies and programmes that had been developed to strengthen the rights of migrant workers at the national level, especially the assistance provided to Filipinos working overseas through the Assistance to Nationals and Legal Assistance Fund.

106. The State of Palestine welcomed the efforts to improve education and commended the steps taken to promote the rights of people with disabilities, including by developing a national action plan.
107. The Sudan welcomed the “green job creation” programme to protect the environment, as well as the accession to the ASEAN Convention against Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children, and the Domestic Workers Convention, 2011 (No. 189), of the International Labour Organization.
108. Sweden was concerned that 7.3 million women in the Philippines had an unmet need for modern contraceptives, as estimated by 2016 government data.
109. Switzerland was gravely concerned at reports indicating that many extrajudicial executions were being carried out and at the legislative steps under way to reintroduce the death penalty.
110. Thailand applauded the protection of vulnerable groups, the implementation of the United Nations Rules for the Treatment of Women Prisoners and Non-custodial Measures for Women Offenders (the Bangkok Rules), efforts to combat human trafficking and provide assistance to victims and the implementation of the “Freedom of information order”.
111. Timor-Leste noted the adoption of the Responsible Parenthood and Reproductive Health Act, the Food Staples Sufficiency Programme, the Sustainable Livelihood Programme and efforts to increase gender sensitivity in the courts.
112. Tunisia welcomed the accession of the Philippines to the Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture and the programmes to combat poverty.
113. Uganda was encouraged by the commitment to achieve inclusive growth under the Philippine Development Plan for 2017-2022 and the 10-point socioeconomic agenda.
114. Ukraine respected the commitment to international conventions and encouraged the Philippines to take measures to improve the human rights situation, including in the criminal justice system and in respect of the rights of children and persons with disabilities.
115. The United Kingdom expressed concern about the high death toll associated with the campaign against illegal drugs and about plans to reinstate the death penalty and to lower the age of criminal responsibility, among other things.
116. The United States of America stressed the importance of investigating the deaths associated with the counter-narcotics campaign.
117. Uruguay welcomed the efforts to protect victims of human trafficking and achievements in the fight against discrimination and violence based on sexual orientation and gender identity.
118. Uzbekistan noted the accession to the Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture.
119. The Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela welcomed the efforts in the fight against poverty and the campaign against illicit drugs.
120. Gabon praised the significant progress made in promoting and protecting human rights since the previous review.
121. Singapore commended the Philippines for its efforts to pursue social justice, achieve inclusive growth and reduce inequality.
122. In relation to violence against women, the delegation of the Philippines stated that guidelines had been issued at the village level for the establishment of points of contact where victims could go to receive immediate help.
123. The delegation of the Philippines reported that an inter-agency committee on children in armed conflict had been created in 2013. There was also a monitoring, reporting and response system for grave violations of children’s rights in situations of armed conflict.

124. The Juvenile Justice Welfare Act had been strengthened. Local government units were required to appoint social workers to assist children in conflict with the law, among others.

125. The programme against child labour had recorded a 47.9 per cent decrease in children involved in labour, had awarded child labour-free certificates to establishments and closed establishments engaging minors in hazardous work. Project Angel Tree provided social assistance to children who had been subjected to child labour.

126. The Government had issued Department Order No. 174, which reaffirmed workers' constitutional and statutory right to security of tenure by prohibiting "labour-only contracting" (an arrangement whereby a contractor or subcontractor merely recruits, supplies or places workers to perform a job or work for a principal) and reinforced workers' rights in terms of labour standards, self-organization and collective bargaining. A review of the enforcement framework would be undertaken.

127. Safeguarding the rights of Philippine workers abroad was a priority. The Philippine Overseas Employment Administration regulated the overseas recruitment industry. The Philippines had bilateral labour agreements with 31 countries of destination. Returning workers were offered reintegration seminars and training.

128. The armed forces implemented the Internal Peace and Security Plan "Bayanihan" (Cooperation), which had been subsumed by the Development Support and Security Plan "Kapayapaan" (Freedom). Both Plans focused on support for nation-building, civil military cooperation, peacebuilding and military action against terrorists and other armed groups. Military operations were only conducted in areas where there had been threats endangering the safety of the people.

129. Executive Order No. 264 had led to the creation of the Citizens Armed Force Geographical Units to assist the military in helping address local insurgency threats in operations during disasters and calamities and in socioeconomic development projects. The Citizens Armed Force was not a paramilitary force. A national task force had been created to disband private armed groups in Bangsamoro and in the adjacent Regions 9 and 12.

130. The collective rights of indigenous peoples were being protected by the Indigenous Peoples Rights Act. There had been no forced evictions of indigenous peoples owing to mining operations. Ancestral domains could not be accessed by mining companies without the free, prior and informed consent of indigenous peoples. That prohibition was also applicable to the armed forces, except in "hot pursuit" operations. The Philippine Development Plan for 2017-2022 raised awareness of the rights of indigenous peoples.

131. Recommendations relating to the death penalty would be discussed with the leaders of Congress. The Government was committed to ending killings and suppressing, to the extent possible, crime caused by the consumption of illegal drugs, corruption and poverty.

132. In summary, the delegation reiterated that the Philippines consistently maintained a culture of respect for human rights; relevant mechanisms and institutions to enable compliance with treaty obligations were in place and functioned properly; the Philippines encouraged inclusiveness in complying with its human rights obligations by encouraging the participation of all stakeholders; the Philippines continued to make significant strides in promoting and protecting the human rights of vulnerable sectors of society; and there was no State policy promoting, sanctioning or encouraging extrajudicial killings, as all law enforcement operations in pursuit of the anti-illegal drug campaign were conducted within the boundaries of the law, as instructed by President Duterte.
