Introduction

1. The Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review, established in accordance with Human Rights Council resolution 5/1, held its twenty-seventh session from 1 to 12 May 2017. The review of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland was held at the 7th meeting, on 4 May 2017. The delegation of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland was headed by the Minister of State, Ministry of Justice, Sir Oliver Heald. At its 14th meeting, held on 9 May 2017, the Working Group adopted the report on the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland.
2. On 13 February 2017, the Human Rights Council selected the following group of rapporteurs (troika) to facilitate the review of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland: Albania, Ethiopia and Mongolia.
3. In accordance with paragraph 15 of the annex to Human Rights Council resolution 5/1 and paragraph 5 of the annex to Council resolution 16/21, the following documents were issued for the review of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland:
 - (a) A national report submitted/written presentation made in accordance with paragraph 15 (a) (A/HRC/WG.6/27/GBR/1);
 - (b) A compilation prepared by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) in accordance with paragraph 15 (b) (A/HRC/WG.6/27/GBR/2);
 - (c) A summary prepared by OHCHR in accordance with paragraph 15 (c) (A/HRC/WG.6/27/GBR/3 and Corr.1).
4. A list of questions prepared in advance by Czechia, Germany, Mexico, the Netherlands, Norway, Slovenia, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland and the United States of America was transmitted to the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland through the troika. These questions are available on the extranet of the universal periodic review.

I. Summary of the proceedings of the review process

A. Presentation by the State under review

5. The delegation of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland confirmed that it represented the United Kingdom, the Crown dependencies and the British Overseas Territories.
6. With regard to the decision to leave the European Union, or “Brexit”, it noted that the Government had published a white paper on 30 March 2017, on its approach to converting existing European Union law into domestic law on the day that the United Kingdom left the European Union. The Government had also made clear that it had no plans to withdraw from the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms (European Convention on Human Rights). The delegation stated that it was clear that rights and liberties had been protected in United Kingdom law long before the Human Rights Act had been passed in 1998 and they would continue to be protected in the future.
7. It indicated that progress had been made since its last universal periodic review in 2012, in several areas. The delegation reaffirmed the commitment of the United Kingdom to human rights.
8. Regarding the third cycle of the universal period review, the delegation emphasized that it hoped to make constructive recommendations on modern slavery, a global problem.
9. The delegation stated that in developing its national report, the Government and also the devolved administrations had consulted with civil society and the national human rights institutions and the dialogue had been very constructive. The Government had also reviewed all the recommendations from 2012 and had updated the State's position to bring its categorization into line with the Human Rights Council's accepted classification of either "supported" or "noted".

10. Responding to advance questions, the delegation indicated that proposals to make abortion available to women carrying a fetus with a fatal abnormality had been presented to the Northern Ireland Assembly in 2016 but the measure had been defeated; it was anticipated that work on reform of the law would continue after the election and the formation of a new Northern Ireland Executive. Any legislative reform would, however, be subject to the will of the Northern Ireland Assembly. Regarding the establishment of a historical investigations unit, it indicated that the Government would continue to work with Northern Ireland parties, victims' groups and other stakeholders to seek a resolution that would allow the Stormont House Agreement bodies to be established.

11. On corporal punishment, the Government had stated that it did not condone any violence towards children and had clear laws to deal with it, and that the "reasonable chastisement" defence could not be used when someone was charged with assault causing actual or grievous bodily harm, or with child cruelty.

12. Regarding children in the armed forces, the Government saw the recruitment of individuals between the ages of 16 and 18 as offering a range of benefits to the individual, and stressed that personnel under the age of 18 were not deployed on any operation outside the United Kingdom except where the operation did not involve personnel becoming engaged in, or exposed to, hostilities.

13. The delegation stated that its counter-terrorism legislation and measures complied with international human rights obligations and were closely scrutinized by the United Kingdom Parliament.

14. Regarding hate crime, the State had a strong legislative framework to tackle it, including criminal offences and the Hate Crime Action Plan 2016.

B. Interactive dialogue and responses by the State under review

15. During the interactive dialogue, 94 delegations made statements. Recommendations made during the dialogue are to be found in section II of the present report.

16. Georgia acknowledged progress achieved in various areas related to children's rights, including the adoption of a number of laws and the strengthening of policy measures.

17. Germany particularly welcomed the lively public discourse on ongoing challenges, and the active participation of civil society in the universal periodic review process.

18. Ghana encouraged the Government to ratify the International Convention for the Protection of All Persons from Enforced Disappearance and the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families.

19. Greece welcomed in particular the noteworthy efforts to tackle human trafficking and modern-day slavery.

20. Guatemala was concerned about the reports that Gypsies, Travellers and the Roma continued to be discriminated against to a large extent and had access to fewer opportunities.

21. Haiti wished the Government and its people a satisfactory outcome during the Brexit negotiations.

22. Sierra Leone commended the efforts to tackle domestic violence effectively through the Modern Slavery Act and the Child Trafficking Protection Fund and expressed its thanks for the assistance provided during the Ebola crisis.

23. Hungary welcomed the Modern Slavery Act 2015 and the Hate Crime Action Plan 2016.

24. Iceland welcomed the Hate Crime Action Plan and the low gender pay gap.
25. India encouraged the continuation of efforts for intercultural understanding and curbing of the negative stereotyping of minorities, and expressed concern regarding the scrapping of the Human Rights Act 1998.
26. Indonesia commended improvements in women's rights, including reducing domestic violence, but was alarmed at the implementation of the Terrorism Act.
27. The Islamic Republic of Iran was concerned at the continued discrimination against minorities, women of black origin and migrant domestic workers, and at the new counter-terrorism measures.
28. Iraq welcomed the introduction of the Modern Slavery Act 2015 and the Hate Crime Action Plan. It noted the non-incorporation of the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination into domestic law.
29. Ireland regretted that the United Kingdom had changed its position on some recommendations from the previous review. It welcomed the commitment to establish the comprehensive institutional framework to address the legacy of the troubles in Northern Ireland.
30. Israel commended the United Kingdom for assigning due importance to the fight against hate crimes and for undertaking to find the right balance between the fight against terror and respect for human rights.
31. Italy took note of the human rights framework and welcomed the measures adopted since the previous review.
32. Japan noted the increase in hate crimes since the June 2016 referendum on leaving the European Union. It commended the monitoring of detention facilities through the national preventive mechanism.
33. Kazakhstan expressed hope that the British bill of rights would not weaken the existing framework and welcomed efforts to combat violence against women, trafficking and slavery.
34. Kenya requested the United Kingdom to ensure that the provisions of the Convention on the Rights of the Child would be integrated into national legislation and policies.
35. Kyrgyzstan noted that race remained the most commonly recorded motivation for hate crimes, and that following the referendum on European Union membership there had been an increase in online hate crime and in anti-migrant attacks.
36. Armenia commended the commitment by the United Kingdom to advance gender equality and combat violence against women, and welcomed measures to tackle discrimination.
37. Libya appreciated the constructive participation in the review and commended the efforts of the United Kingdom to improve its human rights record.
38. Liechtenstein welcomed the measures taken to promote positive parenting and alternative forms of discipline. It noted that the United Kingdom was taking measures to reform privacy and surveillance laws.
39. Malaysia noted progress in addressing domestic violence and support for victims of human trafficking under the Modern Slavery Act 2015. It noted that racially aggravated crime was on the increase.
40. Maldives noted the commitment by the United Kingdom on measures taken by the Government to implement previous universal periodic review recommendations.
41. Mauritius stated that the United Kingdom's denial of the right of Mauritian, particularly those of Chagossian origin, to resettle in the Chagos Archipelago which forms part of the Mauritian territory constituted a human rights violation. Mauritius reiterated its non-recognition of the so-called "British Indian Ocean Territory".

42. Mexico expressed concern about the change in the position of the United Kingdom with respect to some of the recommendations made by Mexico.

43. Mongolia noted the commitment to improve the well-being of children in disadvantaged situations, increased social welfare for persons with disabilities, and measures to combat domestic violence. It welcomed the Hate Crime Action Plan.

44. Montenegro welcomed progress in combating domestic violence. It urged empowering women towards equal participation, and enhancing gender policies, particularly in respect of black women, lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender women, and women with disabilities.

45. The delegation stated that the United Kingdom was clear about its sovereignty over the British Indian Ocean Territory and that no international tribunal had ever called its sovereignty into doubt. The Government strongly refuted Mauritius' claim that the Archipelago which the United Kingdom administers as the British Indian Ocean Territory is part of Mauritius and the United Kingdom expressed disappointment that Mauritius was requesting a referral by the General Assembly to the International Court of Justice, which the United Kingdom believes is an inappropriate use of the International Court of Justice advisory mechanism. The United Kingdom remained committed to good faith bilateral discussions and was disappointed that Mauritius was not giving serious consideration to the two proposals that the United Kingdom had put forward.

46. The delegation indicated that the Human Rights Act made most of the rights contained in the European Convention on Human Rights directly enforceable in United Kingdom courts. The Equality Act, which prohibited direct and indirect discrimination, had introduced a public sector equality duty.

47. Regarding concerns about the bill of rights proposals, the Government remained committed to reforming the human rights framework, and that would be considered once the arrangements for Brexit were known. The Government stated that it was willing to hear proposals for a Northern Ireland-specific bill of rights if sufficient consensus could be reached.

48. Regarding the International Convention for the Protection of All Persons from Enforced Disappearance, the United Kingdom considered that its current domestic framework already included prevention of arbitrary arrest and prohibition of torture and degrading treatment, and held the security and intelligence agencies to account, therefore the Government was unclear about the benefits of ratifying the Convention. It also considered that the rights of migrant workers were already protected in its domestic legislation and therefore the Government was unclear about the benefit of ratifying the Convention on Migrant Workers.

49. The delegation stated that because the United Kingdom had no indigenous or tribal people, as defined in the Indigenous and Tribal Peoples Convention, 1989 (No. 169), in its territory or in the Crown dependencies or Overseas Territories, the obligations of that Convention would not have a practical effect in the United Kingdom. It also explained that the benefits of the individual communications procedures remained unclear, as people in the United Kingdom had access to the application process to the European Court of Human Rights.

50. The delegation indicated that the United Kingdom was keeping under review all reservations on United Nations treaties. It also explained that the United Nations human rights treaties had not been incorporated into domestic law but that the treaties did not require States parties to do so. The United Kingdom had put in place a combination of policies and legislation to give effect to the United Nations treaties that it had ratified. The United Kingdom had signed the Council of Europe Convention on Preventing and Combating Violence against Women and Domestic Violence (the Istanbul Convention) in 2012 and remained committed to ratifying it. It remained firmly committed to tackling violence against women and girls, including through new laws to ensure that perpetrators faced consequences for their actions and by increasing resources for victims.

51. Mozambique commended the implementation of recommendations from previous universal periodic review cycles which had led to the introduction of the Modern Slavery Act, and the launching of the Hate Crime Action Plan.
52. Myanmar commended efforts to improve the human rights of women and children. It urged amending the anti-abortion law in Northern Ireland, as complaints had increased.
53. Namibia commended the United Kingdom for having increased the fight against hatred, especially racism, by launching the new Hate Crime Action Plan in 2016.
54. Nepal noted measures to combat violence against women, discrimination, hate crime and modern-day slavery. It was encouraged by the commitment to official development assistance.
55. The Netherlands noted measures taken to tackle modern slavery. It encouraged safeguarding access to justice. Improved reporting mechanisms and a review of the measures taken would contribute to a better understanding of the scale and severity of hate crimes.
56. Nigeria was encouraged by the domestic human rights framework and acknowledged the launching of the Hate Crime Action Plan.
57. Pakistan noted with concern that racial discrimination, religious profiling and hate crimes against vulnerable groups were on the rise and encouraged the United Kingdom to tackle hate crime.
58. Panama underscored the efforts made by the United Kingdom to incorporate the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights into national legislation.
59. Paraguay welcomed human rights advances, in a time of changes and renewal for the United Kingdom.
60. Peru highlighted the introduction of a number of crimes, including criminal harassment, forced marriage, and omission to protect against female genital mutilation.
61. The Philippines expressed concern about the gender pay gap and about the reluctance to subscribe to multilateral obligations on migrants and refugees. It requested to be enlightened about the “safe return review” for refugees.
62. Portugal commended the measures introduced into the Modern Slavery Act 2015, following recommendations from the previous review.
63. The Republic of Korea underscored the State’s leadership regarding human rights challenges such as modern forms of slavery, hate crime and sexual discrimination.
64. Romania appreciated the measures taken following the recommendations from the second cycle review.
65. The Russian Federation regretted that racial hate crimes were the most spreading ones, and expressed concern about the prosecution of dissent and the low level of prosecution of crimes connected with human trafficking.
66. Rwanda asked whether the Government had undertaken an assessment of potential risk factors for atrocity crimes, with a view to their prevention.
67. Serbia was concerned over the lack of safety for inmates and overcrowding in prisons, and asked whether the United Kingdom was considering raising the minimum age of criminal liability and about achieving a sustainable reduction in the number of children in detention.
68. Honduras shared the concerns with respect to the detention of asylum seekers and the lack of an explicit regulation for the right to family reunification for unaccompanied minors.
69. Singapore commended the United Kingdom for its holistic efforts to combat hate crime, and also for tackling poverty and delivering social justice through various measures.

70. Slovakia called for serious consideration of the rights of the child in the policymaking process. Children should be able to have recourse to the Committee on the Rights of the Child.
71. Slovenia commended the United Kingdom for adopting the Modern Slavery Act 2015 and appreciated the measures to address gender-based discrimination and violence. There was room for improvement in the juvenile justice system.
72. Spain welcomed the Modern Slavery Act 2015 although there were still challenges in its implementation, and expressed concern about increases in hate crimes and hate speech.
73. Sri Lanka underscored proactive measures in countering terrorism and asked the United Kingdom about the challenges in implementing those measures.
74. The State of Palestine commended measures to ensure that its antiterrorism measures complied with its human rights obligations, and welcomed the national action plan on business and human rights.
75. Sudan commended the launching of the new Hate Crime Action Plan, and was concerned about racial discrimination against people of African descent.
76. Sweden was concerned that the United Kingdom had not acted on recommendations concerning its policy regarding child protection, and additionally that the Abortion Act did not apply in Northern Ireland.
77. Switzerland stated that the Government was finding it difficult to provide the necessary means to the Historical Investigations Unit to allow it to carry out its mission.
78. The Syrian Arab Republic recalled the principle of the inadmissibility of acquisition of land by force and the right to self-determination as enshrined in both international human rights covenants and the United Nations Charter.
79. Thailand was concerned with hate-related crimes motivated by racial and xenophobic discrimination, and expressed concern about the proposal for repeal of the Human Rights Act 1998.
80. Timor-Leste commended the Hate Crime Action Plan 2016, and welcomed the Modern Slavery Act 2015.
81. Tunisia commended the United Kingdom's inter-State cooperation to strengthen human rights nationally and internationally. It welcomed progress in combating hate speech and modern slavery.
82. Turkey welcomed the introduction of the Modern Slavery Act and the launching of the Hate Crime Action Plan. It encouraged further improvement of the working conditions of migrants.
83. Uganda noted that domestic violence remained the most pervasive form of violence against women and stated that this required a more consistent and coherent human rights-based approach.
84. Ukraine welcomed the adoption of the Modern Slavery Act 2015 and the establishment of a new task force to accelerate progress in tackling slavery.
85. The delegation indicated that it had introduced the Modern Slavery Act to tackle modern slavery, and the anti-slavery strategy of 2014. It was piloting the recommendation of the November 2014 review of the National Referral Mechanism, and highlighted a number of efforts against human trafficking, modern slavery and exploitation, including legal and institutional measures by the devolved administrations.
86. The delegation indicated that the arrangement on child asylum seekers was fully compatible with international standards, and the best interest of the child was a primary consideration in every decision taken about him or her. The strict limit of 24 hours' detention for an unaccompanied child liable for removal from the United Kingdom had been introduced in 2014.

87. The delegation emphasized that the United Kingdom ensured that sufficient support remained available to cover the needs of asylum seekers and their children. Fully furnished equipped accommodation with all utilities was provided to asylum seekers and their families who would otherwise be destitute, and all asylum seekers had access to health care and schooling for their children. The delegation pointed out that there was no statutory time limit on detention of asylum seekers in the United Kingdom but that it was not possible to detain them indefinitely, based on the presumption of liberty and the principle that detention was a last resort.

88. The delegation recognized that overseas domestic workers were a potentially vulnerable group, and stated that policies had been adjusted to have a better balance between enabling the workers to escape abuse and enabling them to report abuses so that abusers could be identified.

89. The delegation indicated that the United Kingdom had overseen a major programme of reform of stop and search, in order to ensure that it was fair, effective and transparent.

90. Regarding the minimum age of criminal responsibility, the Government believed that children aged 10 were able to differentiate between right and wrong, and they should be held accountable for their actions, although it noted that prosecution was not always appropriate for youth offending. In Scotland, the minimum age would be raised to 12, with safeguards.

91. Young offenders who were convicted of the most serious crimes could receive a sentence of detention for life, but that did not mean that they would automatically be in custody for life, as the person could be released on licence.

92. The Government continued to consider that its counter-terrorism legislation and measures complied with its international human rights obligations, and terrorism legislation was regularly reviewed by an independent reviewer.

93. The delegation stated that the United Kingdom was committed to improving safety and decreasing violence in prisons and referred to a number of measures taken.

94. On hate crime, the United Kingdom provided a strong legal framework to convict those who did incite hatred, but it also tried to protect freedom of speech. The Government had established two cross-party all-parliamentary groups, one focusing on anti-Semitism and one on anti-Muslim hatred, to help understand the issue better. The Government had recently launched its Hate Crime Action Plan 2016 — a comprehensive plan to which the Government was committed. Measures had also been taken in Northern Ireland, Scotland and Wales.

95. The United States of America expressed concern about unsafe and deteriorating prisons and continued reports of societal discrimination against minority groups.

96. Uruguay welcomed advances in combating domestic violence and encouraged the United Kingdom to strengthen efforts to eradicate it.

97. Noting the findings of several United Nations treaty bodies and non-governmental organizations, Uzbekistan made recommendations.

98. The Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela encouraged the establishment of a human rights national plan of action that included measures to implement United Nations mechanisms' recommendations.

99. Albania applauded the commitment by the United Kingdom to maintaining its strong global role in relation to human rights.

100. Algeria welcomed the strengthening of the legal framework on contemporary forms of slavery and racism.

101. Andorra encouraged the United Kingdom to pursue its efforts to promote and protect children's rights.

102. Angola welcomed the strategy to combat domestic violence and the modernization of the prison system.

103. Argentina welcomed the adoption of the Modern Slavery Act 2015.
104. Lebanon appreciated the continued engagement of the United Kingdom abroad and cooperation with the United Nations to enhance human rights despite the decision taken on Brexit in June 2016.
105. Australia commended the leadership on human trafficking and modern slavery, and acknowledged the investigations of deaths in Northern Ireland, prevention of violence against women and girls and creation of domestic violence protection orders.
106. Bahrain commended the launching of the action plan to combat hate crime and the measures taken to combat human trafficking, noting difficulties of victims in accessing medical services and legal assistance.
107. Bangladesh reminded the State of its moral responsibility resulting from the colonial past to ensure that its immigration policies remained transparent, humane and accessible, and was concerned about escalating racial profiling, xenophobia and hate crimes.
108. Belarus regretted that the Government had not given ample attention to some of the recommendations from the previous cycles.
109. Bosnia and Herzegovina recognized the commitment of the United Kingdom to the universal periodic review, its efforts to promote equality and the new Hate Crime Action Plan.
110. Botswana noted concerns by special procedures on the measures taken by the United Kingdom to fight extremism and terrorism and on the draft investigatory powers bill.
111. Brazil believed that despite the challenge imposed by the current migration and refugee crisis, a human rights approach was needed when addressing the issue.
112. Bulgaria commended the efforts in combating violence against women and girls, and noted the roll-out of domestic violence protection orders and the introduction of female genital mutilation protection orders.
113. Canada emphasized the importance of maintaining existing standards and legal protections for human rights, with the United Kingdom preparing to exit the European Union.
114. Chile was concerned about the impact that the exit by the United Kingdom from the European Union would have on its human rights legislative framework.
115. China welcomed human rights progress and noted with concern serious problems of racism and xenophobia against ethnic minorities, while the rights of refugees and migrants had not been guaranteed.
116. Côte d'Ivoire encouraged the Government to strengthen the measures taken to fight all forms of discrimination, and violence against vulnerable groups, and to support and protect victims.
117. Croatia welcomed the steps taken by the United Kingdom regarding the implementation of recommendations from the second universal periodic review.
118. Czechia acknowledged the determination of the United Kingdom to prevent and eradicate modern slavery at both the domestic and international levels.
119. Ecuador was concerned at the frequent cases of hate crimes, the restrictions on granting refugee status and the possible repeal of the Human Rights Act 1998.
120. Egypt was concerned about United Kingdom policies making it a sanctuary for extremists and fertile ground for terrorism, hate crimes and discrimination, and was concerned about policies against migrants.
121. Estonia urged the involvement of all relevant stakeholders when replacing the Human Rights Act 1998 with a British bill, and called for the application of international human rights principles to all under its jurisdiction to be ensured.

122. Finland encouraged the Government to continue working to prevent the growth of intolerance and xenophobia in society and to report on the implementation of the relevant action plan.

123. France welcomed the efforts of the United Kingdom to continuously improve the internal human rights situation.

124. Gabon welcomed the law against violence against women and girls and the establishment of the crimes of forced marriage and non-protection against female genital mutilation.

125. Morocco appreciated the efforts to fight discrimination, in consultation with civil society, the strengthening of laws on racial equality, and measures to combat hate speech and hate crime.

126. Regarding equality and social rights, the delegation stated that the Government of the United Kingdom remained committed to achieving gender equality and the empowerment of all women. From March 2017, the Government had extended the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women to additional British Overseas Territories. The gender pay gap was at its lowest level ever and the measures taken included gender pay gap reporting.

127. Tackling child poverty was a priority for the Government, and it recognized that the root causes were not just financial and that it was necessary to go beyond the safety net provided by welfare. The delegation referred to the Child Poverty Strategy in Northern Ireland, the Fairer Scotland Action Plan and the 2010 Children and Families (Wales) Measure, which would help to tackle child poverty.

128. The delegation referred to announced resources for a package of measures to protect children and young people from sexual abuse, exploitation and trafficking, and to crack down on offenders. Measures taken in the devolved administrations were also mentioned.

129. The delegation noted that the United Kingdom had strengthened the powers and level of independence of the Children's Commissioner, making it more accountable to the United Kingdom Parliament and children.

130. Regarding Roma, Gypsies and Travellers, the delegation referred to the existence of established frameworks against racial and other forms of discrimination and hate crime, and pointed to increased resources for housing.

131. On business and human rights, concrete measures had been taken, including through the Modern Slavery Act 2015, the Companies Act 2006 and guidance to specific sectors. The Government had also funded business and human rights projects in other countries. It continued to encourage wide adoption of the Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights.

132. The United Kingdom had always been a proud and proactive member of the United Nations. The delegation stated that the country was a confident, strong and dependable partner internationally, committed to maintaining its strong global role in relation to human rights and to complying with its international human rights obligations, which included its active participation in and advocacy of the universal periodic review.

133. The United Kingdom had engaged in the universal periodic review session in a spirit of openness and had listened with interest to the viewpoints and perspectives that had been expressed. It was clear that some of the following themes were of real importance to the Human Rights Council: ensuring the ongoing protection of equality and human rights as the United Kingdom left the European Union; a desire for the Government to focus on strengthening its approach to international treaties; a keen interest in the impact of changes to welfare benefits, particularly in relation to vulnerable people, and also access to justice changes, including legal aid and employment tribunal fees; a desire to see continued monitoring of those changes and also for Government to look at the cumulative impact of such reforms; the continued importance of tackling modern slavery and human trafficking, improving safety in prisons, and issues around immigration detention; and the importance of counter-terrorism measures being human rights-compliant.

II. Conclusions and/or recommendations

134. The following recommendations will be examined by the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, which will provide responses in due time, but no later than the thirty-sixth session of the Human Rights Council:
