Introduction

1. The Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review (UPR), established in accordance with Human Rights Council resolution 5/1 of 18 June 2007, held its fifteenth session from 21 January to 1 February 2013. The review of the United Arab Emirates was held at the 12th meeting on 28 January 2013. The delegation of the United Arab Emirates was headed by the Minister of Foreign Affairs H.E. Dr Anwar Mohammad Gargash. At its 16th meeting held on 31 January 2013, the Working Group adopted the report on the United Arab Emirates.
2. On 14 January 2013, the Human Rights Council selected the following group of rapporteurs (troika) to facilitate the review of the United Arab Emirates: Ethiopia, Germany, Thailand.
3. In accordance with paragraph 15 of the annex to resolution 5/1 and paragraph 5 of the annex to resolution 16/21, the following documents were issued for the review of the United Arab Emirates:
 - (a) A national report submitted/written presentation made in accordance with paragraph 15 (a) (A/HRC/WG.6/15/ARE/1);
 - (b) A compilation prepared by OHCHR in accordance with paragraph 15 (b) (A/HRC/WG.6/15/ARE/2);
 - (c) A summary prepared by OHCHR in accordance with paragraph 15 (c) (A/HRC/WG.6/15/ARE/3).
4. A list of questions prepared in advance by The Netherlands, Norway, Mexico, Slovenia, Spain, Sweden and the United Kingdom was transmitted to the United Arab Emirates through the troika. These questions are available on the extranet of the UPR.

I. Summary of the proceedings of the review process

A. Presentation by the State under review

5. The head of the UAE delegation noted that the UPR process represented a beacon for the cause of human rights worldwide and an unparalleled opportunity for the UAE to promote a transparent and inclusive approach to human rights. He described steps undertaken since the 2008 UPR in order to implement the outcomes of that review, noting that in 2010, a committee comprised of government bodies and advisers from civil society had been set up to ensure follow-up to commitments made. The committee now acted as a permanent forum for the consultative process with civil society and had conducted a wide consultation with stakeholders in preparing the national report for the 2013 UPR.
6. The delegation recalled that at the 2008 UPR, the UAE had accepted 36 recommendations and made 9 additional voluntary pledges, of which more than 90 per cent were implemented. The UAE's report for the 2013 UPR demonstrated the efforts made to act on the findings of the review, and the continuous progress achieved.
7. The delegation explained that the UAE had a stable political system characterized by a consultative relationship between its citizens and its government, the application of the rule of law and good governance. Although the UAE took pride in its achievements, it was never satisfied with the status quo and was strongly committed to further improving the situation. The Government took concerns of any possible violation of human rights very seriously and was constantly working to strengthen its capacity to respond to these.

8. The delegation then outlined measures taken since 2008 to enhance the legislative and institutional frameworks for the promotion of human rights, noting that the Constitution had been amended in 2009, and that the tenure of the Federal National Council members had been extended to four years.

9. He explained that the UAE had implemented diverse legislative initiatives, including measures to strengthen the rights of workers and of persons with disabilities, and that it was in the process of adopting a federal law concerning children's rights.

10. The delegation highlighted that several governmental entities concerned with human rights had been established, and that studies had been carried out on national human rights institutions with a view to informing decisions about the institutional framework in the UAE.

11. Noting that the UAE's engagement with the international community in the field of human rights needed to be multifaceted, the UAE noted that it was studying the accession to international conventions, in addition to further cooperation with treaty bodies and special procedures, the UPR and the activities of the Human Rights Council. In this vein, the UAE had already acceded to various international conventions, including, most recently, the Convention against Torture. The UAE would continue to review and actively consider ratification of other international human rights instruments.

12. Furthermore, the UAE welcomed visits by UN Special Rapporteurs and had received visits by the Special Rapporteur on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography, and the Special Rapporteur on Racism and Racial Discrimination in 2009, and by the Special Rapporteur on Trafficking in Persons in 2012.

13. On labour rights, the delegation explained that the UAE had an extensive strategy for safeguarding the rights of workers and improving their work and living conditions, and that it was fully committed to strengthening the rights of workers so that they can enjoy opportunity in the UAE, free of any form of abuse or exploitation. Measures to protect labour rights included the conclusion of memoranda of understanding with major labour-exporting countries; regulations protecting the rights of workers in case of disputes with employers; a new wage protection system introduced in 2009; measures guaranteeing decent and safe accommodation for workers; provisions regarding medical care; and rights for workers to move from one job to another without time limitations. In addition, the Government had recently approved a new law to protect domestic workers, which would be issued this year and would afford far greater protection.

14. The delegation further emphasized that the right to practice religion freely was a firmly protected right.

15. Regarding women's rights, the delegation highlighted the UAE's strong record, noting that women participated meaningfully in every facet of civic and political life, and that in December 2012, the Cabinet had made it compulsory for corporations and government agencies to include women on their boards of directors. Women also played an important role in the Federal National Council and occupied leadership positions in different institutions. For example, there were four women in the Federal Cabinet and there were a number of female federal judges. Furthermore, women were major contributors to the UAE economy. Thus, the Council of Businesswomen in the UAE had more than 12,000 members, who ran more than 11,000 ventures, with an estimated value of $3.4 billion.

16. In 2011 the UAE had taken another important step in cementing the rights of women when the UAE President issued a decree according citizenship rights to children born to Emirati women but whose father is not Emirati. It accords them citizenship rights, and at the age of eighteen they have the choice of taking UAE nationality or retaining the father's nationality. The government was taking the implementation of recommendations on women's rights very seriously and was in the process of adopting a National Strategy for the Advancement of Women for 2013 to 2017.

17. Regarding human trafficking, the delegation noted that the UAE was committed to the global effort to combat this phenomenon and was taking a lead on this issue regionally. It was the first country in the Arab region to enact a comprehensive anti-trafficking law, and remarkable progress had been made since 2007 on the UAE's anti-trafficking strategy. Related initiatives had included training courses and workshops; a media campaign to enhance public awareness; a strategy to combat all forms of forced labour; and an expansion in the number of shelters for women and children victims of human trafficking and sexual exploitation.

18. Regarding the UAE's international commitments, the delegation noted that in 2011 the UAE had disbursed a total of USD $2.1 billion in grants and loans to development, humanitarian, and charity programs worldwide.

19. The UAE also highlighted its attention to organizing workshops focused on spreading human rights principles among law enforcement authorities in charge of combating terrorism, and the allocation of significant resources to infrastructure development in remote areas.

20. The progress achieved in the UAE was also evidenced by its ranking in the UN's Human Development Index, which indicates that the UAE has the highest level of human development in the Arab world.

21. Referring to challenges in connection with the turbulence in the Arab world over the last two years, the delegation stated that the UAE had worked to maintain its stability and security, protect the progressive nature of its society and prevent extremism from gaining a foothold. Noting that every country had to find the right balance between preserving civil liberties and maintaining national security, the delegation stated that the UAE had not shied away from its responsibility to protect national security, but would continue to exercise this responsibility strictly within the framework of its constitution, laws and judicial practices, with due respect for international human rights principles.

22. In this vein, the head of delegation reaffirmed the UAE's commitment to the promotion of human rights and to multilateral engagement, including through the UPR process.

B. Interactive dialogue and responses by the State under review

23. During the interactive dialogue, 88 delegations made statements. Recommendations made during the dialogue are to be found in section II of the present report.

24. Armenia noted the Government's positive approach towards the visit of the High Commissioner for Human Rights and the Special Rapporteur on racism. It commended the Government's commitment to education and steps taken to incorporate human rights into compulsory education. It noted the National Strategy for the advancement of women. 28. Bahrain commended the adoption of legislations and national plans concerning the elderly, the protection of migrant workers, the care of children of unknown parents and the empowerment of women. It wished to know whether there was a mechanism for consulting civil society on human rights policies and legislations. Bahrain made recommendations.

29. Bangladesh welcomed Government efforts to consolidate the human rights situation and commended the formulation of a strategy regarding migrant workers' rights. It requested information on measures taken to protect the wages of workers. It made a recommendation.

30. Belarus noted the commitment of the UAE to combat human trafficking. It welcomed its accession to the Palermo Protocol and its cooperation with the Special Rapporteurs on human trafficking and on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography. It noted the high level of medical care provided to citizens. It made recommendations.

31. Belgium commended efforts to give effect to the results of the first cycle review and encouraged the UAE to continue on this path. It was concerned about restrictions to freedoms of expression and association. It made recommendations.

32. Bhutan noted the establishment of a National Committee to Combat Human Trafficking and asked about mechanisms to support victims of trafficking. It encouraged the UAE to continue its cooperation with human rights mechanisms. It made a recommendation.

33. Brazil recognized efforts made against human trafficking and on migrant workers. It was encouraged by measures to expand women's opportunities and asked which national policies, measures and legislation were in place to address racial discrimination. It made recommendations.

34. Brunei Darussalam welcomed steps to strengthen women's rights. It was also encouraged by initiatives to ensure the right to education, such as the project to integrate young persons with special needs in schools. It commended the UAE's role as host to the headquarters of IRENA. It made a recommendation.

35. Burkina Faso noted the ratification of several international human rights instruments, bills under consideration regarding migrant workers and the rights of the child, and the establishment of a centre for child protection. It made recommendations.

36. Australia welcomed the UAE's efforts to eliminate gender-based discrimination, including through granting citizenship rights to all children of UAE women. It encouraged further measures to strengthen the human rights framework, including regarding freedoms of expression and assembly. It made recommendations.

37. Chad commended the will of the Government to improve the protection human rights, in particular through constitutional amendments and adoption of legislation. It encouraged the UAE to continue its cooperation with human rights mechanisms to remove all obstacles to the full enjoyment of all rights.

38. Chile commended measures adopted to promote human rights and the ratification of various conventions. It welcomed the importance placed by the authorities on evaluating existing strategies to promote women's rights. It made recommendations.
39. China commended the UAE on achievements in advancing the empowerment of women, the protection of rights of children, persons with disabilities and the elderly, and its investment in health, education and social protection. It noted with satisfaction the Government's focus on the green economy and sustainable resources. It made recommendations.
40. Costa Rica highlighted the absence of a prohibition of discrimination based on national origin, and noted that the kafala system often stripped workers of protection in law and in practice. It echoed concern expressed by CEDAW regarding the trafficking of women and children. It made recommendations.
41. Cote d'Ivoire applauded initiatives in respect of child rights and human rights training targeted at Government officials and police officers. It invited the Government to continue such training, improve its implementation and extend its scope. It made recommendations.
42. Cuba commended the steady progress made by the UAE in promoting and protecting human rights. Cuba asked what measures had been taken to promote the right to education. It made recommendations.
43. Cyprus acknowledged the commitment of the UAE to protect the rights of migrant workers, including through legislative decisions, and to ensure their access to decent housing. It encouraged the UAE to consider ratifying ILO Conventions Nos. 87 and 98. It made recommendations.

51. France commended efforts to strengthen protection of human rights, particularly with regard to migrant workers and women. It congratulated the UAE on its ratification of CAT and CRPD. It made recommendations.

52. The UAE delegation, commenting on questions related to religious tolerance, stated that this was a major success story of the UAE as it had successfully married Muslim tradition with the presence of various other religious practices in the country. The UAE had also successfully handled situations in which it had been crucial to reconcile national security with an open society and freedom of expression. Regarding women, the delegation said that the UAE had one of the most progressive records in the region.

53. Regarding labour issues, the delegation stated that in 2008, the UAE had set up an Office for the protection of wages to ensure that workers are paid in accordance with their contracts. Since 2010, a decision had allowed workers to move to another company after expiration of their contract, or upon non-respect of their contract by the employer. Moreover, the Ministry of Interior had taken efforts to ensure that foreign passports cannot be withheld except by a legal order, although workers could choose to keep their passports with the employer. The UAE had also worked with labour-exporting countries so as to ensure respect for workers and prevent their exploitation.

54. Regarding accession to international conventions, the representative of the UAE stated that the country was considering accession to some conventions. With regard to ICCPR and ICESCR, the UAE were in the process of considering whether these Covenants were compatible with national legislation and relevant cultural and religious values. With regard to reservations to the CRC, the UAE is studying whether it will be possible to withdraw some of them as recommended by a recent study. Concerning reservations to CEDAW, the UAE intended to ensure equality between men and women first before addressing this issue. Regarding OP-CAT, the UAE reiterated that it had ratified CAT only in 2012 and that it would look into this matter in the near future. With regard to the Rome Statute signed in November 2000, the UAE would take the common position of Arab countries concerning its ratification.

55. The United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland encouraged the UAE to strengthen the protection of foreign workers, including by implementing legislation to curb abuses and improve working conditions. It also urged the UAE to establish a National Human Rights Institution and abolish the death penalty. It made recommendations.

56. Greece asked about efforts to establish a national independent human rights institution. It requested further information on the results of actions taken with regard to trafficking in persons. Lastly, it asked the UAE to provide an evaluation of its actions concerning human rights education. It made a recommendation.

57. Guatemala welcomed the incorporation of human rights departments within various ministries. It welcomed also the ratification of CAT and CRPD. It urged the UAE to continue initiatives to ensure that all women may fully exercise their rights and freedoms on an equal footing with men. It made a recommendation.

58. Hungary congratulated the UAE on its high ranking in the index on the rule of law and judicial transparency. It noted that the UAE ranked first in the Arab world in the gender equality index published by the World Economic Forum in 2011. It made a recommendation.

59. India hoped that adequate monitoring mechanisms were in place to ensure the implementation of domestic legislation. It welcomed the wide range of interrelated national policies and strategies, and legislation to improve women's rights. It urged the UAE to implement the Electronic Contract and Validation System. It made recommendations.

60. Indonesia commended the UAE's ranking in development according to the Human Development Report. It welcomed various measures to empower women. It encouraged the UAE to continue its exemplary role in the promotion of human rights in the region. It made recommendations.

61. Iraq noted the UAE's commitment to advance in the area of human rights and the measures adopted since the first UPR report. It commended the ratification of CAT. It requested further information on measures taken to protect the rights of the elderly. It made a recommendation.

62. Ireland encouraged the UAE to establish a human rights institution in accordance with the Paris Principles. It stressed the importance of ensuring that the internet remained an open, global and public forum and that freedom of expression was fully respected. It made recommendations.

63. Italy asked how the UAE intended to address the problem of consular assistance for foreign nationals detained by the UAE authorities. It was concerned about recurrent cases of gender violence and asked if the UAE envisaged ad hoc measures aimed at better preventing such violence. It made recommendations.

64. Japan hoped that newly created national human rights organizations would function effectively to further improve the human rights situation. It noted concerns about the detention of human rights defenders and hoped that the UAE would eliminate such concerns by releasing information. It made recommendations.

65. Jordan appreciated the UAE's institutional and legislative advances, including federal laws on the rights of disabled persons. It commended the creation of a Human Rights Department at the Interior Ministry and operational measures to improve the conditions of foreign workers. It asked about efforts to promote human rights in developing countries. It made a recommendation.

66. Kenya noted the UAE's commitment to improving human rights. It encouraged the UAE to establish a national human rights institution. Kenya made a recommendation.

It asked what mechanisms had been established to spread the culture of political participation. It made a recommendation.

68. Latvia took note of the UAE's cooperation with Special Procedures and of the visits by the Special Rapporteurs on racism, sale of children and trafficking in persons, since 2009. It made recommendations.

69. Lebanon welcomed the concrete steps to implement the recommendations from the first UPR cycle. It requested more information about the empowerment of women and their political participation. Lebanon made a recommendation.

70. Libya welcomed the UAE's policies and strategies, including on promoting women's and children's rights, combatting human trafficking, protecting workers' rights and raising the level of education. It made recommendations.

71. Malaysia applauded the UAE's efforts in its human rights awareness raising programme, its promotion and protection of women's and children's rights and in its development of rural areas. It also commended the UAE for its accession to CRPD. Malaysia made recommendations.

72. The Maldives congratulated the UAE for progress in women's and labour rights, and its strengthening of institutions. It requested to know about initiatives to develop infrastructure in remote areas. It made recommendations.

73. Mauritania appreciated the UAE's commitment to human rights, and its accession to various international instruments. It also appreciated action regarding the rights to education and healthcare, social protection and decent living conditions, gender equality, protection of the rights of the child, people with special needs and the elderly. It made a recommendation.

74. Mexico applauded the establishment of governmental bodies and public institutions for the defence of human rights, as well as regulations to guarantee the protection of women's physical and moral integrity, and their participation in political life. It made recommendations.

75. Montenegro took note of the UAE's willingness to promote the role of women in society and eradicate human trafficking, but expressed concern that discrimination against women persisted. It noted that internet freedom was limited. Montenegro made recommendations.

76. Morocco noted the progress made towards greater enjoyment of fundamental freedoms and human rights. It commended measures to spread a human rights culture, especially through the education system and relevant judicial training. It asked the UAE to clarify the steps taken to introduce the human rights guiding principles and its relation to the business sector. It made recommendations.

77. Nepal appreciated the UAE's launching of national human rights strategies. It also commended the UAE's efforts in empowering women, protecting the rights of children, the elderly and persons with disabilities, and in promoting education, healthcare and social welfare. Nepal made recommendations.

78. The Netherlands commended the UAE for its developments in several areas. It called upon the UAE to extend a standing invitation to Special Procedures. It made recommendations.

79. Nicaragua highlighted the work of the UAE since its last review, including the revision of its regulatory framework and the development of policies to strengthen the human rights system, particularly the rights of vulnerable groups. It encouraged the country to ratify new international instruments. It made a recommendation.

80. Norway expressed concern at the deterioration in freedom of expression and at reports of arbitrary detentions and arrests. It welcomed steps to improve the conditions of migrant workers, the forthcoming establishment of a human rights institution and the amendments to the law on citizenship. Norway made recommendations.

81. Oman noted that the UAE was forging ahead with comprehensive developments to guarantee the fundamental rights of its individuals through political commitment and a package of legislations on rights such as health, education, security, non-discrimination and equality, and freedom of opinion and belief.

82. Pakistan appreciated the Government's efforts in honouring its voluntary pledges through accession to CAT and CRPD. It took note of the adoption of a manual on general standards for shared housing for workers, as well as the care for children of unknown parentage. It made recommendations.

83. The head of the UAE delegation responded to various comments, including on labour issues, noting that improvements had been made in the labour conditions but that this is an area that will need continuous improvement in the UAE. He welcomed comments from delegates from major labour-exporting countries who had highlighted their good cooperation with the UAE on labour issues. The UAE welcomed the increased transparency that has been brought about by the UPR process, and the capacity-building that had been undertaken in relation to the UPR. Human rights had also increasingly become part of the training of the police, and now had departments responsible for it in the Ministry of Interior, and other Government Ministries. Regarding cooperation with UN mechanisms, the UAE confirmed that it welcomed visits by Special Rapporteurs and looked forward to further constructive engagement.

84. On the issue of a group recently detained in the UAE, the delegation explained that the country had to deal with the challenge of extremist organisations, which did not share the UAE's progressive vision of society, including the empowerment of women and pursuing religious tolerance. The UAE would not abandon its progressive agenda because of different views held by a small minority. However, the issue would be addressed in accordance with due process and in line with the UAE's legal framework, and the cases concerned had now been sent to Court.

85. On human trafficking, the delegation noted that a campaign had been launched after the adoption of Law No. 51 (2006). A National Commission and a national strategy to combat human trafficking had been put in place. The Commission had been working on legislation to implement Law No. 51. Measures taken included training and awareness-raising activities, the adoption of punitive and deterrent measures, and programmes to protect and rehabilitate victims. The National Commission also pursued bilateral cooperation with countries concerned, as well as the development of a regional Arab initiative together with the Arab League.

86. The State of Palestine valued the efforts made by the UAE in areas such as women rights, combatting racial discrimination, and the right to education. It welcomed the UAE's accession to the Palermo Protocol and its establishment of ministerial departments for human rights. It paid tribute to efforts in combatting trafficking of persons. It made recommendations.

87. The Philippines commended the UAE for acceding to the Palermo Protocol and protecting the rights of migrant workers. It appreciated its active leadership and engagement in regional consultations on labour migration. It made recommendations.

88. Portugal noted the UAE's strategic plan to combat human trafficking. It welcomed the UAE's commitment to women's rights and their empowerment. It made a recommendation.

89. Qatar paid tribute to efforts made at institutional and legislative levels such as the establishment of ministerial departments for human rights and the formulation of strategies including the "Emirates Vision 2021". It appreciated the UAE's voluntary pledges made during the first UPR cycle and its accession to international instruments including CAT and CRPD. It made recommendations.

90. Saudi Arabia paid tribute to the UAE's cooperation with international mechanisms and procedures. The UAE continued its political, judicial and social reforms and the strengthening of human rights institutions, thereby seeking a dignified life and bright future for its people. It made recommendations.

91. Senegal was pleased to note the UAE's advances in human development and in the promotion of women's rights. It also noted measures to fight human trafficking and improve the situation of migrant workers. It made a recommendation.

92. Serbia commended the UAE's efforts in protecting children's rights. It noted activities of the National Committee to Combat Human Trafficking and the National Programme of Assistance for Victims of Human Trafficking. It made a recommendation.

93. Singapore noted the UAE's achievement in promoting gender equality and its high Gender Equality Index; the compulsory inclusion of women on boards of directors; and the creation of a National Committee to Combat Human Trafficking. It made recommendations.

94. Slovakia commended the UAE for ratifying CRPD, CAT and the Convention against Transnational Organised Crime and Palermo Protocol. It noted the high educational levels attained by citizens and equal enrolment rates for boys and girls. It noted that Emirati women married to foreigners were allowed to transfer their citizenship to their children. It made recommendations.

95. Slovenia welcomed the UAE's accession to several human rights treaties, and the consideration of ratifying OP-CRC-SC and OP-CRC-AC. It welcomed the establishment of shelters for women and children victims of domestic violence. It made recommendations.

96. Spain congratulated UAE for its commitment to the UPR process, as demonstrated by the national plan to implement the recommendations from the first cycle. It noted the ratifications of CAT and CRPD. It made recommendations.

97. Sri Lanka commended the UAE's strategies in education, healthcare and housing. It welcomed initiatives to empower women and promote the rights of migrant workers. It made a recommendation.

98. Sudan valued the UAE's establishment of institutions for the promotion and protection of human rights, including the Office for the Respect of the Law and the High Committee for the Protection of Children, along with efforts in promoting women's rights and gender equality. It made recommendations.

99. Sweden was concerned by restrictive actions regarding freedom of expression, which the government had restricted on the internet. It was also concerned by reports of employer and sponsor abuse of migrant and domestic workers rights. It made recommendations.

100. Switzerland noted the UAE's ratification of CAT, but expressed regret at its failure to ratify other international human rights instruments. It noted that the death penalty was only rarely applied in the UAE. It made recommendations.

101. Thailand applauded the UAE for acceding to various conventions, improving its domestic legislative framework and building the human rights capacity of stakeholders. It acknowledged efforts to combat trafficking in persons and appreciated steps taken to improve the working conditions of migrant workers. It made recommendations.

102. Togo noted the UAE's accession to CAT, the CRPD and the Palermo Protocol and encouraged accession to OP-CRC. It commended the UAE for its promotion of women's rights. Togo made recommendations.

103. Tunisia noted constitutional amendment of 2009, the establishment of institutions tasked with human rights issues and the ratification of CRPD and CAT. It noted efforts to promote gender equality and human rights education, and to improve living and housing conditions. It encouraged the ratification of remaining core human rights instruments. It made recommendations.

104. Regarding comments on the Cyber Crime Law, the head of the UAE delegation explained that the aim of Law No. 5 (2012) was to address many aspects of the use or misuse of the internet, providing sanctions for the use of the internet for trafficking crimes, money laundering, the promotion of racial hatred, terrorism, pornography and identity theft, among others. At the same time, the law addresses matters of public order and national security, including matters such as organizing demonstrations without a licence, calling for the overthrow of the Government or insulting the UAE rulers. Although these were sensitive matters which could be the subject of an open debate particularly regarding fears concerning restrictions on freedom of speech, the content of this law should not be misunderstood or distorted to call into question the country's commitment to the rule of law and respect for human rights and freedoms.

105. Regarding comments related to the strengthening of the human rights culture, including through human rights training, the delegation confirmed that it was continuing efforts in this direction. Regarding questions on labour issues, the UAE noted that the domestic workers' law was in the final stages of the legislative process. Once adopted, this law would close an important gap. More generally, over the past four years, the UAE had taken increased efforts to address labour protection issues but they realised this would be a dynamic process and would require further work in the future.

106. On human trafficking and domestic violence, the delegation referred to the existence of shelters, which provided a safe place for victims and were accessible through a 24 hours hotline. They also provided case management and support planning, as well as counselling and legal services. Shelters worked in liaison with UNHCR and IMO referral mechanisms and also pursued cooperation with relevant NGOs to support victims.

107. Turkey commended the UAE for its progress in all areas of human rights, in particular its national policies to empower women, promote migrant workers' rights and combat human trafficking. It recognised that the UAE is pursuing a goodwill strategy to enhance the rights and conditions of all workers and to raise their awareness thereof. It made recommendations.

108. Turkmenistan appreciated the UAE's accession to CAT, CRPD and the Palermo Protocol. It was pleased to note that a number of Special Procedures had visited the UAE at the invitation of its Government. It made recommendations.

109. Germany enquired about the status concerning accession to OP-CRC-SC and OP-CRC-AC and regarding the establishment of an independent human rights institution. It enquired whether the legislation to combat information technology crimes contained safeguards against undue infringement of freedom of expression. It welcomed steps to strengthen the status of women. Germany made recommendations.

110. The United States of America commended the UAE on enhancing migrant worker protection, including procedures to identify victims of forced labour, and its Virtual Global Task Force to protect against online abuse and sexual exploitation. However, it remained concerned that political activists had been arrested and held without charge. It made recommendations.

111. Uruguay highlighted progress made through the incorporation of human rights issues in governmental departments. It noted that certain legal provisions were detrimental to the rights of women. It noted also the complicated situation of human rights defenders in the country. It made recommendations.

112. Uzbekistan welcomed UAE's accession to CAT and progress toward signing OP-CRC-SC and OP-CRC-AC. It took a positive view of efforts in combatting human trafficking. Uzbekistan asked the UAE about its plans to promote further international cooperation.

113. Venezuela (Bolivarian Republic of) noted the significant increase in the budget allocation for health and the implementation of strategic programmes to combat chronic disease. It highlighted the considerable reduction in infant mortality. It asked what efforts were being made regarding the protection of persons with HIV/AIDS. It made a recommendation.

114. Viet Nam commended the UAE's commitment to promoting and protecting human rights, its establishment of the Committee to combat human trafficking and interrelated strategies to promote women's and children's rights. It applauded the UAE's high ranking in the human rights-related lists and its international cooperation. It made a recommendation.

115. Algeria welcomed the ratification of CAT and CRPD and progress towards accession to OP-CRC-SC/AC, as well as the study to establish a NHRI. It noted policies to promote economic, social and cultural rights, especially regarding foreign workers and advancement of women. It made recommendations.

116. Angola noted with satisfaction the UAE's commitment to promoting and protecting women's rights, reflected by the increase in women occupying positions within ministerial, diplomatic and judicial institutions, and in the police and armed forces. It commended the UAE's accession to CAT and CRPD. It made a recommendation.

117. Argentina applauded the establishment of the Centre for Child Protection within the Ministry of the Interior, the creation of the Committee to combat the crime of trafficking in persons, and the ratification of CAT. It made recommendations.

118. Liechtenstein was concerned that corporal punishment of children was lawful within the family and as a sentence for crime. It made recommendations.

119. Afghanistan welcomed the UAE's policies and strategies promoting and protecting rights and freedoms, as well as its accession to major international instruments. It commended the UAE for its contribution to developing countries. It made recommendations.

120. The Republic of Korea welcomed the "Emirates Vision 2021" strategy. It noted the UAE's efforts to establish a national human rights institution and welcomed its ratification of CAT and CRPD. It made recommendations.

121. The head of the UAE delegation assured that the UAE would closely study the comments and recommendations received during the review with a view to further improving its record. On questions related to HIV, the delegation referred to a decision taken by the Cabinet in 2010 to upgrade the national programme on combating HIV, which addressed various important issues in this area and aimed to improve the lives of those who suffer from this illness, enabling them to study and work, and to play a productive and positive role in society, including through social and financial support.

122. With regard to the legal system, the delegation conveyed its pride regarding international indicators which revealed that the transparency of its legal system enjoyed a high rank among the countries of the world. The delegation thanked the Chair and the Troika for their role. He noted that all institutions and civil society had benefited from the UPR process, for which they had prepared over a period of two years through an inclusive dialogue. In the process, the UAE has built capacity, a very important thing in itself. Over 130 civil society organisations had participated in this process.

123. The delegation reiterated that the UAE would continue to address labour issues and it would exchange experience and expertise with friends and partners to further improve its record. Substantial progress had already been made since 2008. The UAE had carefully listened to observations made at the 2008 review, and it was again doing so now.

124. On the status of women, the delegation highlighted the UAE's positive record, which was outstanding among countries in the region, at a time which saw the reversal and regression in the rights of women in many countries of the Arab region, even in countries that had undergone revolutions.

125. The UAE also emphasized its progressive record on minority rights, religious tolerance and harmony between the different communities, which was the essence of the society that the UAE aspired to maintain. In this spirit, the UAE was also gradually developing the political participation process, as initiated in 2006. The delegation stated that the UAE would continue to fight against extremist agendas, which attempted to undermine this record with a regressive and conservative approach.

126. The delegation also acknowledged the existence of some boundaries, derived from the country's religious and cultural framework, which required all laws to be in line with the foundations of Arab and Muslim society and did not allow different cultures to be super-imposed on the UAE society.

127. The delegation concluded that the UAE's record, while not being perfect, was a strong and positive one, which was at the forefront in the region and which the UAE was keen to defend.
