Introduction

1. The Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review (UPR), established in accordance with Human Rights Council resolution 5/1 of 18 June 2007, held its eighteenth session from 27 January to 7 February 2014. The review of Eritrea was held at the 18th meeting on 3 February 2014. The delegation of Eritrea was headed by H.E. M Tesfamichael Gerahtu. At its 17th meeting held on 6 February 2014, the Working Group adopted the report on Eritrea.
2. On 15 January 2014, the Human Rights Council selected the following group of rapporteurs (troika) to facilitate the review of Eritrea: Austria, Indonesia and Sierra Leone.
3. In accordance with paragraph 15 of the annex to resolution 5/1 and paragraph 5 of the annex to resolution 16/21, the following documents were issued for the review of Eritrea:
  - (a) A national report submitted/written presentation made in accordance with paragraph 15 (a) (A/HRC/WG.6/18/ERI/1);
  - (b) A compilation prepared by OHCHR in accordance with paragraph 15 (b) (A/HRC/WG.6/18/ERI/2);
  - (c) A summary prepared by OHCHR in accordance with paragraph 15 (c) (A/HRC/WG.6/18/ERI/3).
4. A list of questions prepared in advance by Czech Republic, Belgium, Germany, Liechtenstein, Mexico, Netherlands, Norway, Slovenia, Spain, Sweden, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, United States of America was transmitted to Eritrea through the troika. These questions are available on the extranet of the UPR.

I. Summary of the proceedings of the review process

A. Presentation by the State under review

5. The delegation thanked those states that sent advance questions and concerns, as well as expressions of support. Eritrea valued all constructive engagements on the full enjoyment of human rights and fundamental freedoms.
6. The delegation stated that the contents of the UPR Report focused mainly on the implementation of the accepted recommendations and related issues. The Report was prepared through the process of broad participation and high responsibility. A Steering Committee composed of representatives from all the relevant line ministries and chaired by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs was established. Civil Society organizations were also represented in the Committee. The UN Country team in Eritrea also gave its inputs.
7. The delegation stated higher level consultations have been made including with law enforcement agencies, members of the judiciary, regional administration and civic organizations on the Draft codes and are now ready for proclamation. Furthermore, new laws on access to water, food security, privatization of state owned enterprises and access to justice, as well as the accountability of judicial services and the expansion and extended jurisdiction of the community magistrate courts have been introduced.
8. The delegation stated that the Constitution was the sources of all legislative measures and the basis of economic, social, cultural and political policies and actions. While local and regional elections were in motion, national election remained pending until the threats to national security and sovereignty were eliminated. The delegation acknowledged that more effort was needed to establish some institutions provided for in the Constitution. Despite challenges and problems, efforts to strengthen the legal system and the rule of law have gained significant momentum in the last four years.

9. The delegation stated that the national development efforts were focused on the consolidation of all aspects of social justice to ensure that every citizen has the ability to lead a life of dignity with development in a society that reflects the common values and aspirations. Equal rights and opportunities have become the hallmarks of the Government's strategic interventions to ensure equitable distribution of basic services and the expansion of even development in all regions and localities.

10. The delegation stated that micro credit schemes for rural farmers, women cooperative farms, disadvantaged women, disabled citizens and other needy sections of the community have expanded significantly. The major Government institutions, the Eritrean Development Bank and other stakeholders have thus increased the level of investment and the degree of support to these disadvantaged groups.

11. The delegation stated that the privatization of Government owned entities and enterprises and the establishment of a privatization agency under the Proclamation issued in 2013 was expected to widen the opportunities for all citizens to benefit from the wealth of the nation at various levels.

12. The delegation stated that programmes to assist all the disadvantaged social groups have been expanded by the Government in collaboration with stakeholders and Eritreans inside and outside of the country.

13. The delegation provided information on the steps taken towards cultural transformations as well as to explore the cultural heritage of all the ethnic groups in conformity with the ideals of national unity and national development.

14. The delegation stated that Eritrea has redoubled its effort to improve the life style and conditions of living of its entire population. The strategy targeting poverty elimination and transforming living standards was an ongoing effort.

15. The delegation stated that the demographic distribution of services by the Government has shown remarkable progress in terms of access, coverage and viability. In the previously disadvantaged areas, as well as rural sections and periphery parts of the country, there has been continuing growth on all social indicators in the last four years.

16. The delegation stated that Eritrea was on course to achieving three MDG Goals (MDG 4 on reducing child mortality, MDG5 on improving maternal health and MDG6 on combating HIV/AIDS, malaria and other diseases). It was also on track on four other goals.

17. In areas of human dignity, the delegation stated that the Eritrean Correctional and Rehabilitation Services (ECRS) had a major undertaking of rehabilitating and reintegrating convicted prisoners into the society upon release.

18. The delegation stated that torture was criminalized in the domestic legal system and thus close monitoring has been an established practice in the last four years. Moreover, evidence collected through these means remained inadmissible in courts of law.

19. The delegation stated that Government has also continued its strict policy of zero-tolerance for all forms of sexual violence. Awareness campaigns have been stepped up by all concerned agencies. Police have been conducting public forums and campaigns in high schools.

20. The delegation stated that any contract of marriage between persons below 18 years of age was null and void. Spouses and witnesses to such marriage faced punishment under the Penal Code.
21. The delegation stated that the Government has outlawed the practice of female genital mutilation/cutting and extensive campaign was going. Reported cases were submitted to the courts and penalized. However challenges still remain in addressing this problem which included reaching nomadic populations and the bringing about of behavioural changes through knowledge and awareness.
22. The delegation stated the rights of the child were at the centre of the Government policies and strategies. Effort has been made to strengthen the family unit, provide a better environment for the growth and development of children and empower communities to coordinate and promote good childcare and appropriate socialization practices. There was also a successful expansion of the Community Based Orphan reintegration programme.
23. The delegation stated that there were no cases of child labour in Eritrea. Children were not recruited for labour but that there was a culture, tradition and practice of children participating in family activities and work. Raising the monitoring capacity and awareness of all concerned were major challenges.
24. The delegation stated that the Government has established a probation service providing counselling and integrating children who were in conflict with the law into schools and neighbourhoods after their release.
25. The delegation stated that the political and social roles of women in political activities, the elected assemblies, administrations at local and regional levels, and in other government positions have improved in the last four years.
26. The delegation informed of the effort made to bridge the gender gap in education and enhance the quality of girls' education in the school system. With regard to combating adult illiteracy, data from the 2011/2012 academic year showed that 52, 747 adults participated in adult literacy programs, with women constituting 95% of the participants. Similarly Vocational training programmes for women were also significant and during this academic year, out of a total of 4,640 students enrolled 38% percent were women.
27. The delegation stated that Eritrea has continued to encourage voluntary repatriation of those who may have left the country illegally and in violation of the immigration laws, with several rehabilitation and reintegration programmes for those returning on their own volition. The Government was working to establish a mechanism to facilitate access to relevant international bodies, particularly the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, in accordance with Recommendation 107 from the first review.
28. The delegation informed of the reorganization and restructuring of government structures starting from the local level in accordance with the motto: "political dynamism and effective management and organization". Also, the Government has focused on activating the involvement of communities in managing their own affairs, with the emphasis of local empowerment through greater devolution of authority to local governance and regional administrations.
29. The delegation stated that the political landscape respected fundamental freedoms, namely freedom of expression, association and religion. No one has been detained for expressing his or her views or ideas, including for criticizing government policies and actions. There has never been any restriction on the internet. Religious harmony, mutual respect, mutual understanding of the religions has continued to flourish.
30. The delegation stated that Eritrea has submitted reports with regard to CEDAW, the Convention on the Rights of the Child and the eight conventions on ILO. The Government has also responded to many questionnaires and letters from those bodies; and has also responded positively to Communications brought by the Compliant Procedure of the Human Rights Council and to the Council itself during the 20th and 21st Sessions. To date, Eritrea has attended all the Regular Sessions of the Council since the 19th Session with the objective of working closely with the Council.

31. The delegation stated that Eritrea was wrongly targeted with politically motivated Resolutions of the HRC that denigrate the ongoing efforts of the Government in promoting and protecting human rights and fundamental freedoms. Eritrea considered that country specific resolutions did not serve the advancement of human rights. It was also a double standard and a deviation from the UPR process that created a forum for constructive engagement.

32. The delegation stated that the imposition of unjustified sanctions has negatively impacted the full enjoyment of human rights. Eritrea has been subjected to a litany of accusations of gross violations of human rights, while the facts on the ground illustrate that these accusations were invalid and were mainly motivated by sinister political agendas.

33. The UN sanctions imposed on Eritrea and the continued occupation of sovereign Eritrean territories entail the prolongation of national service and other onerous burdens on the country and its people also deserve consideration. Unnecessary expenditure for defence as well as undesirable delays in some aspects of the political process are by-products of this reality and it is in this respect that the continued occupation of its sovereign territories violated the right of the Eritrean people to live in peace. In this regard, the delegation called on the Council to give due regard in its agenda to the right of the Eritrean people to live in peace.

34. The delegations informed of some of Eritrea's best practices in the advancement of human rights, which included the community based approach in addressing social problems, the approach to orphans and other vulnerable children with disability, and the provision of free education up to the tertiary level. There was also the nominal fee for health services up to referral treatment and the Injury Surveillance System, as well as observance of UN recognized internal days as an occasion to promote public awareness on critical issues.

B. Interactive dialogue and responses by the State under review

35. During the interactive dialogue, 70 delegations made statements. All recommendations made appear in section II of the report.

36. Armenia noted efforts to improve socioeconomic conditions, especially the national policy on food security. Noting the provision of free compulsory basic education and efforts to improve school enrolment, it expressed concern that the final year of schooling was undertaken in military training camps.

37. Australia was disappointed that no special Procedures mandate holder had been permitted to visit Eritrea, and that the country's Constitution had still not been implemented. It was concerned about reports of torture, harsh prison conditions and incommunicado detention, and compulsory military service.

38. Austria commended the decision to invite OHCHR to visit. It expressed concern with lack of due judicial process, questionable detentions and poor detention conditions. Indefinite military conscription constituted forced labour, and deepened poverty. The lack of free press curtails freedom of expression.

39. Belgium noted progress in combating FGM, but expressed concern regarding the deterioration of the human rights situation in several areas. It noted the use of children in armed conflicts.
40. Bhutan noted provision of free education, vocational skills training for school dropouts and economic empowerment programmes for women, among other achievements. Eritrea had made progress towards attaining the MDGs on health, gender equality, poverty, hunger, and primary education.
41. Botswana, acknowledging progress in health and education and gender equality, noted reports of disappearances, torture, detentions without trial, judicial interference, and restrictions on the freedoms of movement, expression and public participation. It encouraged Eritrea to strengthen rule of law and civil and political rights.
42. Brazil encouraged further efforts to enhance women's rights. It expressed concern that Eritrea had not ratified core human rights treaties, and that freedom of expression and religion remained limited. Brazil asked how the international community could support the implementation of recommendations.
43. Canada asked Eritrea about steps taken to repeal criminalization of consensual homosexual activity. It expressed concern about poor prison conditions, torture and secret detention centres. It urged Eritrea to fulfil its obligations and allow monitors and special procedures mandate holders to visit Eritrea.
44. Chad noted that significant consultations with all relevant stakeholders had been held while preparing the national report. It acknowledged that Eritrea was party to some of the principal international human rights instruments.
45. Chile welcomed the adoption of Proclamation 158/2007 prohibiting FGM and related awareness-raising campaigns. It was concerned by forced disappearances. It noted progress towards the health-related MDGs.
46. China acknowledged promotion of economic, social and cultural rights, which improved food security, integrated rural development, infrastructure strengthening, health, and education, and promoted gender equality. It called on the international community to provide assistance to meet challenges.
47. Colombia acknowledged efforts in the implementation of recommendations of the first UPR cycle and highlighted particularly progress in respecting women's rights and access to health care and education. Colombia would share its experience in designing and implementing mechanisms to monitor implementation of recommendations.
48. Croatia noted efforts to educate girls and attain the MDGs related to gender equality. It welcomed efforts to eradicate FGM, but was concerned that incidence of FGM remained high. It expressed concern about non-recognition of conscientious objection to military service, and the impact of indefinite military service on children and society.
49. Cuba noted efforts to improve social, economic and cultural rights, particularly the right to food, health and education; emphasizing positive reforms in basic education, prohibition of child labour and re-education of minors in conflict with the law. It acknowledged integration of women in government.
50. Estonia urged Eritrea to implement all recommendations made and cooperate with special procedures mandate holders; to increase efforts and funding to improve women's rights and eliminate FGM and forced marriage; and to ensure freedom of expression, association and assembly.

51. Denmark expressed concern that very little progress had been made in implementing recommendations accepted under the first UPR cycle, particularly concerning combating torture and other ill-treatment. It noted that CAT had not been ratified.
52. Djibouti noted the lack of effort to implement recommendations from the first UPR cycle. It expressed concern regarding the fate of prisoners secretly detained during the 2008 border conflict with Djibouti, and the lack of cooperation with the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in Eritrea.
53. Ecuador acknowledged legislative progress made, notably in working towards replacing the Transitional Codes and adoption of Proclamation 158/2007 to abolish FGM. It noted work to relocate orphans, particularly children orphaned as a result of HIV/AIDS.
54. Egypt noted that the Judiciary Branch was in the final stage of drafting new Codes to replace the Transitional Codes of Eritrea, and that Eritrea's international obligations had been taken into account in the new Codes.
55. The Czech Republic remained concerned about the lack of progress on key human rights issues, including the numerous pending requests of UN Special Procedures to visit the country.
56. France noted the contacts carried out between the High Commissioner for Human Rights and the Eritrean authorities to discuss assistance to tackle human rights issues. It noted efforts made to address social rights, particularly regarding health, but remained concerned by the human rights situation.
57. Gabon noted progress and good practice in implementing recommendations made during the first UPR cycle. However, many challenges remained. It encouraged Eritrea to ratify international human rights instruments and improve collaboration with OHCHR, Special Procedures, and other mechanisms.
58. Switzerland remained concerned about extra judiciary executions, forced disappearances, indefinite national service, arbitrary detention, and restricted freedoms. It wished that civil society could play a greater role. Noting the promotion of education, it invited Eritrea to improve civil and political rights.
59. Ghana urged Eritrea to complete the ratification and implementation of the CAT, CRPD, ILO Convention on the Worst Forms of Child Labour and International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families.
60. Indonesia noted Eritrea's efforts to promote and protect human rights, in particular the ECOSOC rights such as the 2010 Water Proclamation and the 2012 Proclamations to enhance access to justice and the right to basic education.
61. Iran (Islamic Republic of ) acknowledged the challenges faced by the Government in the achievement of most socioeconomic areas such as education, health care, economic growth and social justice.
62. Ireland was concerned at the failure to respond to the requests of special procedures mandate-holders. It reiterated the call of the HRC in its resolution 23/21 for Eritrea to fully implement its 1997 Constitution. It noted continued practice of FGM.
63. Italy was concerned about reports of torture and about indefinite conscription amounting to forced labour. It recognized efforts to boost trade and investment to alleviate poverty and improve living standards. It noted that some population groups were more vulnerable to discrimination.
64. Japan hoped that Eritrea would cooperate with the international community, including UN mechanisms. It expected Eritrea to end impunity, the use of torture, arbitrary and extrajudicial detentions and enforced disappearances. It hoped for further progress on the issues of FGM and sexual violence.

65. Kenya noted the ongoing commitment to providing subsidized health care and free education. It highlighted that some of the recommendations accepted by Eritrea during the previous UPR cycle had not been implemented, particularly concerning torture and child labour.

66. Latvia recalled that during the first UPR review it had recommended that Eritrea step up cooperation with the special procedures and noted that visit requests by special procedures had not yet been accepted.

67. Lithuania strongly encouraged Eritrea to cooperate with the Special Rapporteur on Eritrea and other special procedures mandate-holders. It was concerned at failure to implement previous recommendations and expressed concern about restrictions to freedom of assembly and expression, and that rape and sexual violence during military service were widespread.

68. Luxembourg remained concerned at discrimination and violence against women and girls, particularly early marriage, FGM and sexual and domestic violence. It was deeply concerned that many young unaccompanied Eritreans were taking refuge in neighbouring countries following their parents' detention, exile or military service.

69. Malaysia noted ongoing efforts to improve the rights of women and children, particularly in the area of education. It noted that more efforts were needed to meet the first MDG to eradicate extreme hunger and poverty.

70. Mauritania noted the enactment of legislation to improve the situation of women and vulnerable groups. It urged the Government to step up its efforts to promote national reconciliation, social harmony and political stability.

71. Mexico was concerned about the high number of political prisoners, persons detained for desertion and the treatment and conditions of persons in the Sawa military camp. It stressed the importance of allowing access to the ICRC, family visits and legal and medical assistance.

72. Montenegro asked what steps had been taken to end the compulsory practice of all children completing their final year of schooling in a military camp; why there was a delay implementing recommendations on ratification of treaties such as CAT, OP-CAT, ICCPR-OP2, CPED and CPRD; and what steps had been taken to implement the Constitution without delay and hold free and transparent elections.

73. Namibia noted efforts made to finalize new criminal and other codes and its proclamations on water and enhancing access to and better delivery of justice.

74. The Netherlands remained concerned about severe restrictions on freedom of expression, association and religion, prolonging military service, arbitrary detention, torture, prisoner maltreatment, extrajudicial killings and secret prisons. It urged Eritrea to allow the ICRC unrestricted access to prison facilities.

75. Nigeria urged Eritrea to expedite implementation of the recommendations from the previous UPR cycle, incorporate international human rights conventions into domestic legislation, ensure press freedom, improve health institutions and access to health services and prioritize education. It invited Eritrea to ratify the CPED.

76. Norway expressed concern at the excessive militarization of Eritrean society and its reported effect on people's daily lives and the lack of freedom of expression. It noted that the rule of law and fundamental freedoms were still not respected in Eritrea.

77. Paraguay noted challenges but recognized efforts to improve access to water and sanitation, food, health care and education. It expressed concern about reports of serious violations of human rights, particularly arbitrary detentions, extrajudicial killings, enforced disappearances and inhumane conditions of detention.
78. The Philippines noted efforts to implement the recommendations from the first UPR and attain the MDGs, improve the situation of women and children and address gender inequality and FGM.
79. Portugal welcomed efforts to assist street children. It was concerned that all children must complete their final year of schooling in a military training camp, involving the conscription of children into the military.
80. The Republic of Korea noted efforts to implement the recommendations from the first UPR and progress towards attaining the health-related MDGs and advancing women in parliamentary and government positions. It remained seriously concerned about the human rights situation.
81. Romania hoped that the Eritrean authorities would take the necessary steps to ensure the exercise of human rights by all Eritrean citizens. It was concerned about reports of the many challenges remaining since the last UPR.
82. The Russian Federation noted progress made in promoting and protecting human rights since the first UPR, but acknowledged remaining problems.
83. Saudi Arabia noted efforts thus far, despite a lack of resources, and highlighted the 2010 Water Proclamation and the 2012 Proclamation to enhance access to justice. It encouraged further efforts to promote and protect human rights at all levels.
84. Singapore noted the results obtained in combating HIV/AIDS and malaria and reducing the child mortality rate. It acknowledged promotion of gender equality, increased government funding for women to set up their own businesses, and available vocational training.
85. In response to advanced questions as well as questions and comments from the floor, the delegation emphasised that no person was detained for peacefully expressing his or her views, and that media censorship was not practiced. Also, no journalist was detained for performing his or her duty under the professional ethics of journalism.
86. Freedom of Association was guaranteed under the Constitution and other laws and that there were various associations working without any restrictions and with full freedom. There were labour unions and that the autonomy of trade unions were guaranteed under the Labour Proclamation No. 118/2001. Eritrea had signed and ratified the seven ILO Conventions and it is duly submitting its reports in this regard.
87. The Government issued the 1995 Proclamation and the 2002 registration model, which required all religious organizations to register and declare their property. Some groups who refused to adhere to the law were alleging that they were persecuted.
88. After the criminalization of FGM an intensive anti-FGM campaign was conducted and was yielding good result. Also, underage marriage was criminalized. The government followed a strict policy of zero-tolerance to sexual violence.
89. The delegation stated that consented same sexual conduct was against the values and culture of the Eritrean society.
90. The Delegation stated that there was no arbitrary detention in Eritrea. National Service was not limited to military service and encompassed reconstruction and rehabilitation of the country damaged by war. The law strictly prohibited child soldiers and only those who were 18 years of age and above were doing national service.

91. Trafficking in persons was a criminal act and Eritrea was cooperating with all the concerned countries and agencies in this regard.
92. All the provisions enshrined in the Constitution with the exception of those dealing with national election, for the obvious reason of “the no war no peace situation”, were strictly implemented and adhered to.
93. The so called “G15” who were high government officials were detained for treason and subversive acts that were committed at the time of war when the very existence of the country was under threat. By so doing they abdicated their membership. The Eritrean National Assembly at its 14th Session discussed their cases, and mandated the Government to handle the matter appropriately.
94. The delegation stated that the death penalty can serve as deterrent factor. This punishment had been used in very exceptional and limited cases.
95. The Convention against torture and Conventions on the rights of persons with disability, on the Protection of the Rights of Migrant Workers and Members of their Families Convention on the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labour have been internally processed and is ready for approval and endorsement. Normally the process takes some time until it is reviewed by all the concerned government institutions and examined by the Ministry of Justice for harmonization with the other national laws.
96. The Delegation stated that Eritrea endeavoured to submit its regular reports for the conventions and treaties that it had signed, and will consider requests for visits by Special Rapporteurs on case by case basis. However, special mandate holders on country specific issue do not promote the course of human rights. It negates neutrality and objectivity. The appointment of Special Rapporteur on Eritrea was politically motivated and intended to undermine the UPR mechanisms.
97. Slovakia noted that further efforts were needed to address challenges to the freedoms of movement and expression. It called on Eritrea to cooperate fully with special procedures mandate holders and OHCHR to improve the human rights situation in the country.
98. Slovenia commended efforts to achieve the MDGs and noted the decrease in cases of FGM. It expressed concern at reports of rape and sexual harassment in military or educational training camps or during interrogation, of domestic violence and of harsh conditions in detention facilities.
99. Somalia called upon the country to promote their rich ethnic, cultural, linguistic and religious diversity and to work towards a lasting peace among all the people in the Horn of Africa.
100. South Sudan acknowledged progress in the field of education at all levels, particularly in school enrolment of girls. It noted that, despite progress made in combating FGM, it remained prevalent and encouraged the Government to make further efforts.
101. Spain was concerned at the human rights situation in Eritrea and at the lack of implementation of many of the previous recommendations. It noted progress on the right to safe drinking water and sanitation and on child protection but considered that there remained many shortcomings.
102. Sudan noted efforts to improve the rights of women, persons with disabilities and children, particularly the provision of assistance to orphan children and juveniles. It called upon the relevant bodies to provide the technical cooperation requested to improve human rights.

103. Sweden acknowledged progress on certain related-health MDGs but recommendations to improve political and civil rights had not been addressed. It noted that violations of freedom and speech and the press were of concern and that the Special Rapporteur on Eritrea had not been granted access to the country.

104. Germany deplored the lack of progress in the human rights situation since the first UPR cycle and noted that none of the accepted recommendations it had made had been implemented. It expressed deep concern at the continued forced labour of conscripts.

105. Thailand noted that challenges remained to the promotion of women's rights, including protection from domestic violence and FGM. It noted the commitment to establish a standing committee to receive complaints of human rights violations and encouraged Eritrea to consider areas of cooperation with OHCHR.

106. Togo noted some progress in implementing the previous recommendations, the adoption of programmes to provide assistance to orphans and street children, the provision of free compulsory education and the focus on education for girls.

107. Tunisia reaffirmed its support for the Eritrean people, the creation of a democratic state and respect of human rights. It noted the adoption of legislation to strengthen the judicial system, protect children's rights and ensure gender equality.

108. Turkey considered that Eritrea's invitation to the OHCHR should pave the way for further cooperation through technical support. It noted the emphasis on education for women and girls and the policy to eradicate FGM as part of its efforts to achieve gender equality.

109. Uganda noted the programme for the economic empowerment of women, the Integrated Rural Development Schemes, the Nomadic Education Policy Framework, the establishment of vocational training schools, the provision of adult and lifelong education and the prohibition of FGM.

110. The United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland urged Eritrea to cooperate with the United Nations and the Special Rapporteur on Eritrea. Regretting the lack of progress on human rights, it hoped that concrete improvements would be forthcoming. Eritrea should fully implement its Constitution.

111. The United States of America urged promoting human rights and fundamental freedoms and to invite the Special Rapporteur. It expressed concern that the Government did not prioritize civil and political rights and had not accounted for the disappearance of political prisoners and noted the lack of democracy.

112. Uruguay encouraged Eritrea to redouble its efforts to implement all recommendations, strengthen cooperation with the United Nations and to strengthen efforts to incorporate international obligations into its new legislation. It recognized progress in the fight against FGM.

113. Venezuela (Bolivarian Republic of) noted the development of social investment programmes for more equal wealth distribution, which had improved health, food security and access to water and sanitation. It noted progress in basic and compulsory education.

114. Yemen noted suitable changes to the jurisdiction of courts, the revision of procedures and legislation to ensure social justice to ensure access to food security, health services, education and infrastructure, and other amendments to domestic legislation.

115. Afghanistan noted progress in the protection of children's rights through the provision of free basic education and the prohibition of the engagement of minors in any occupation that endangered their physical and mental development, and measures for health protection.

116. Algeria considered that ratification of certain international instruments would positively contribute to the human rights situation. It noted that efforts were needed to combat poverty and prevent violence and discrimination against women, including FGM. Technical assistance would be required for Eritrea to fulfil its human rights obligations.

117. Argentina shared the concerns relating to the political, security, humanitarian and human rights situation in Eritrea expressed in the last resolution of the Human Rights Council on the “Human Rights Situation in Eritrea.

118. The delegation stated that the recommendation relating to the two percent tax and the destabilizing of the Horn of Africa was an issue out of context. Eritrea is an active member that tries to promote peace and stability. The issue lacked a human rights dimension and was abusive. In this connection, the Delegation called upon the President of the Human Rights Council to rule out this recommendation.

119. Eritrea was committed to working with the Council in the advancement of human rights under the UPR mechanism. The country specific resolution on Eritrea was unjustified as it was initiated for political reasons to attain political objectives. This kind of approach undermines the UPR process.

120. Eritreans have fought long and hard, and paid enormous sacrifices for their self-determination. It is, therefore, fit and proper that the country's priority has been ensuring peace and security, accelerating the development agenda and preserving the life and dignity of a people. The delegation called on the Council to exercise its moral authority in lifting the sanctions and in ending occupation. These were challenges that could not be taken lightly as they continued to impede the country's efforts in the fulfillment of its human rights obligations.

121. The President of the Human Rights Council brought to the attention of the delegations the rules and procedures required for preparation of the reports of the Working Group, according to which these reports were factual and must reflect the interventions made by the State under Review and other delegations taking the floor.

II. Conclusions and/or recommendations
