Introduction

1. The Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review (UPR), established in accordance with Human Rights Council resolution 5/1 of 18 June 2007, held its twenty-second session from 4 to 15 May 2015. The review of Malawi was held at the 3rd meeting on 5 May 2015. The delegation of Malawi was headed by Honourable S.B. Tembenu. At its 10th meeting held on 8 May 2015, the Working Group adopted the report on Malawi
2. On 13 January 2015, the Human Rights Council selected the following group of rapporteurs (troika) to facilitate the review of Malawi: Albania, Kazakhstan and Kenya.
3. In accordance with paragraph 15 of the annex to resolution 5/1 and paragraph 5 of the annex to resolution 16/21, the following documents were issued for the review of Malawi:
  - (a) A national report submitted/written presentation made in accordance with paragraph 15 (a) (A/HRC/WG.6/22/x/1);
  - (b) A compilation prepared by OHCHR in accordance with paragraph 15 (b) (A/HRC/WG.6/22/x/2);
  - (c) A summary prepared by OHCHR in accordance with paragraph 15 (c) (A/HRC/WG.6/22/x/3).
4. A list of questions prepared in advance by Kenya, Liechtenstein, Mexico, Norway, Slovenia, Sweden, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland was transmitted to Malawi through the troika. These questions are available on the extranet of the UPR.

I. Summary of the proceedings of the review process

A. Presentation by the State under review

5. The delegation stated that Malawi had undergone two peaceful political transition processes. In April 2012, following the death of the country's third President, the Vice President assumed the Presidency. In May 2014, the first ever tripartite elections were held, electing a fifth post-independence President, Members of Parliament and Local Government Councillors.
6. The general framework for human rights was guided by the Constitution, which also provided the institutional and enforcement framework, as well as limitations and restrictions and instances where derogation from rights was permissible. The Constitution also provided for principles of national policy, and contained a Bill of Rights, which domesticated Malawi's obligations under international human rights framework.
7. There were several institutions that play significant roles in protecting and protecting human rights, such as the Ministry of Justice, the Human Rights Commission, the Law Commission, the Office of the Ombudsman and the Prison Inspectorate. The Ministry of Justice and the Human Rights Commission lead the process of drafting a National Human Rights Action Plan with support from the United Nations Development Programme. There were 105 human rights civil society organizations that compliment government efforts on issues of human rights and democratic governance.
8. Malawi has endeavoured to clear the backlog of state party reports. In 2012, the initial report to the Human Rights Committee on the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights was submitted. In 2013, the initial report to the African Commission on the African Charter on Human and People's Rights and the Protocol on the Rights of Women was submitted. In 2014, the report on the Convention on the Elimination of all forms of discrimination against women was submitted. In 2015, a combined third, fourth and fifth periodic report on the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child, an initial report on the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on the involvement of Children in Armed Conflict and the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography as well as the initial report to African Union on the African Charter on the Rights and Welfare of the Child were submitted. Preparation of reports in respect of the Convention against Torture, International Covenant on Economic Social and Cultural Rights, the Convention on the rights of persons with disabilities, and the Convention on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination was ongoing.

9. Recommendations from the Special Rapporteur on the Right to Food, Mr. Olivier De Schutter following his visit in July 2013, were being considered by the Government for implementation.

10. In 2012, the Disability Act was passed providing for equal opportunities for persons with disabilities and the establishment of a Disability Trust Fund. However, the Fund was yet to be established. Following a situation analysis on children with disabilities in 2011, a National Work Plan on programmes for children with disabilities was developed, to strengthen coordination in the development and implementation of programmes that promote rights of all children with disabilities.

11. Several steps have been taken to ensure that persons in detention were kept in humane and decent living conditions. Electric cooking pots have been procured for all prisons to ensure that inmates have access to their daily portions of cooked food. Human Rights have been mainstreamed in the Malawi Prisons Service, as a necessary measure to prohibit torture. Also, human rights education has been included in the basic training curriculum for prison staff. Social Welfare Officers have been appointed in all prisons. Human Rights open days have been held in prisons during which awareness raising programmes have been held for prisoners. Parole regulations have been formulated as a measure to reduce prison overcrowding. A register of prisoners has been developed to track prisoners' overstay.

12. Police Officers have been trained to refrain from perpetrating torture and to ensure that rights of suspects were respected. A Professional Standards Unit investigated all cases of torture while efforts to establish the Police Complaints Commission were underway. Diversion Guidelines, Victim Support Unit Guidelines and Child Protection Policy have been developed and the Police training manual has been reviewed. The establishment of the "Lay Visitor's Scheme" has also contributed to the reduction of human rights violations. The Scheme comprised of local leaders, paralegals and women, all of whom were empowered to make unannounced visits to police cells and attend to complaints by detained suspects.

13. A building for the Commercial Division of the High Court was under construction in Blantyre. Buildings for the magistrate courts have either been constructed or renovated in six districts. The intention was to have the Judiciary staffed with 40 High Court Judges in the near future. There were currently 11 Justices of Appeal and 22 Judges of the High Court. Two Justices of Appeal and 10 Judges of the High Court were appointed in the period between 2012 and 2014. In 2014, 57 third grade magistrates were appointed and deployed to rural areas.

14. The Judiciary, in conjunction with the Directorate of Public Prosecutions, was in the process of installing a case management system to increase efficiency in the handling of criminal case files thereby reducing the backlog of cases.

15. To ease the implementation of the Child Care, Protection and Justice Act of 2010, subsidiary legislation was being developed, as well as a cost implementation plan to facilitate resource mobilization and actual implementation of the Act. The Act has been translated into vernacular languages. A strategic plan for the rehabilitation and integration of children living and working on the streets back to their communities and families has been developed.

16. A study on violence against children and young women conducted in 2014, revealed the existence of abuse in homes and schools among boys and girls. A national response plan has been launched.

17. In 2010, a case management approach was launched. This approach has improved children's access to multiple services through better referrals and follow-up. There were currently various programmes and policies for children which lead to developments such as the Essential Package for Early Childhood Development (ECD), Guidelines for caregivers in identifying and supporting children with special needs, Comprehensive training manual for ECD that includes issues of child rights and women rights, Minimum standards for quality improvement in the delivery of services to orphans and other vulnerable children. The Government was developing the guidelines for caregivers for the operation of Children Corners, and one stop centers in central and district hospitals, providing holistic services for victims of abuse.

18. The Government has undertaken initiatives to prevent child labour which included ensuring family income security, identification of children below minimum age and in hazardous work, rehabilitation of children to prevent them from going back to work, protection through risk management, awareness raising campaigns, child labour inspections to identify the working children, advocacy for change of attitude on child labour, prosecutions of those responsible for child labour, commemoration of child labour open days, setting up Community Child Labour Committees. The curriculum for primary education has a life skills component that empowers children to protect themselves against violations of their rights.

19. To promote the rights of women and girls, the Deceased Estates (Wills, Inheritance and Protection) Act 2011, Gender Equality Act in 2013, the Marriage, Divorce and Family Relations Act 2015, and the Trafficking in Persons Act 2015 have been enacted, and simplified and translated into two local languages.

20. The delegation provided detailed information on the Malawi Growth and Development Strategy II (MDGS II), a medium term plan for 2011-2016 with the objective of creating wealth through sustainable economic growth and infrastructure development as a means of achieving poverty reduction.

21. In December, 2011, the National HIV and AIDS Strategic Plan, 2011 – 2016, was adopted. The Plan aimed at reducing new infections by 20 percent, the reduction of child infections by 30 percent and AIDS related deaths by 50 percent, and adult infections by 15 percent and AIDS related deaths by 8 percent.

22. The Government was committed to offering comprehensive sexual and reproductive health and rights services in tandem with the international, regional and national policies. The delegation stated that there has been a decline in child mortality of more than 50 percent.

B. Interactive dialogue and responses by the State under review

23. Seventy-four delegations made statements the summaries of which appear below. All recommendations made appear in Section II of this report.
24. Côte d'Ivoire noted the efforts in the area of ratification of international human rights instruments, such as OP-CRC-AC in 2010, and noted several policies for protection of vulnerable persons, including a National Plan of Action for Children 2014-2018.
25. Cuba noted the important socio-economic challenges faced by Malawi. It also noted efforts to improve human rights protection highlighting the work of the Ombudsman, the Human Rights Commission and the Law Commission. It praised the Government's commitment to fight HIV/AIDs.
26. The Democratic Republic of the Congo stated that additional efforts were still required to overcome certain traditional practices, to effectively contain spread of HIV/AIDS, to achieve gender equality, to improve protection of children and to ensure food security to the population.
27. Denmark welcomed the acceptance of recommendations to ratify OP-CAT and noted that OP-CAT establishes a set of practical tools on how to prevent torture and ill-treatment. It highlighted that the Convention against Torture Initiative stands ready to assist Malawi on this issue.
28. Egypt commended the constructive role played by various institutions in the field of protecting human rights in Malawi. Egypt also encouraged Malawi to pursue its policies aimed at enhancing the empowerment of women in various socio-economic fields, as well as combating the negative phenomenon of street children.
29. Ethiopia noted with satisfaction that Malawi was on track to achieve MDGs on combating HIV/AIDS, malaria, and other diseases and reducing child mortality as well as tracking poverty. Ethiopia also commended the launching of the 2012 Agriculture Sector Guidelines and HIV/AIDS Strategy for the period 2017.
30. Gabon encouraged Malawi to complete measures taken for women's rights, particularly ensuring the adoption by Parliament of the Marriage, Divorce and Family Relations Bill and a better representation of women in Parliament and the governmental bodies.
31. Germany expressed its disappointment regarding continued discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation and gender identity and the fact that there had been no reform of the legislation on refugees. Germany was also concerned about the situation in prisons and detention centres.
32. Ghana noted with satisfaction the passing of the Gender Equality Act, however, shared the concerns raised by UNCT regarding the rather slow review processes of certain policies and legislative instruments, particularly the Witchcraft Act.
33. The Holy See congratulated Malawi on the two peaceful political transition processes since the last UPR in 2010, especially on the first ever tripartite elections in May 2014. It also commended the adoption of the 2012 Disability Act.
34. Honduras encouraged Malawi to continue institutional and democratic progress. It also encouraged Malawi to continue adopting the necessary measures to eliminate gender disparities in areas such as education health, and agriculture and to implement as soon as possible the law on disabilities.
35. Iceland welcomed the adoption of the Marriage, Divorce and Family Relations Bill and commended the adoption of the Gender Equality Act. Iceland urged Malawi to repeal the provisions of the Criminal Code which criminalized consensual, adult same-sex conduct and to repeal other laws that discriminated against LGBTI persons.

36. Indonesia commended Malawi in advancing the rights of people through cooperation among institutions and undertaking legal reforms to harmonize international conventions into national legislations. Indonesia was also pleased to note the drafting of the Trafficking in Persons Bill.

37. Italy welcomed Malawi's engagement in combating harmful practices such as child early and forced marriage and female genital mutilations and encouraged Malawi to further engage on these issues.

38. Kenya encouraged Malawi to complete the drafting a National Human Rights Action Plan and to continue to clear the backlog in the submission of overdue State party reports under the various human rights instruments.

39. Kuwait noted the implementation of projects in various fields and commitment to strengthening economy through the 2nd Growth and Development Strategy. Kuwait also acknowledged Malawi's commitment to generating welfare, ensuring sustainable growth, and strengthening infrastructure, as a means to reduce poverty.

40. Libya noted Malawi's efforts to promote and protect the rights of the child through the National Action Plan to eliminate the child labour as well as child marriage. Libya also appreciated Malawi's efforts to promote economic and social development and MDGS II.

41. Luxembourg congratulated progress achieved in the socio-economic field and commended the adoption of the 2nd Growth and Development Strategy. It, however, noted that inequality of gender still remained despite measures taken to promote the rights of women and to combat violence against them.

42. Madagascar was pleased with the adoption of the Disability Act and the Gender Equality Act, and several laws related to promotion and protection of the rights of the child. Madagascar encouraged Malawi to continue these efforts in order to ensure the full enjoyment of human rights.

43. Mauritania noted ratification of human rights instruments and reforms to the legal framework to ensure that it was compatible with human rights norms and stated that these were a testimony to Malawi's seriousness and international and ethical commitment.

44. Mauritius recalled that it had previously recommended that consideration be given to the promotion and strengthening of vocational education and training to reduce high level school drop-outs. It thanked Malawi for accepting its recommendation and urged Malawi to continue with the initiatives in this regard.

45. Mexico welcomed legislative efforts by Malawi noting the enactment of legislation on children, gender equality and education but also observed shortcomings in areas such as access to information and prisons. It also noted efforts to present reports to treaty bodies.

46. Montenegro welcomed the adoption of the Gender Equality Act that had defined the term "discrimination against women" and prohibited "harmful practices". It asked Malawi to elaborate on the activities undertaken to enforce existing legislation prohibiting female genital mutilation.

47. Morocco commended the creation of the Office of the Ombudsman, Human Rights Commission and Law Commission. Morocco also supported the National Human Rights Action Plan and a series of reforms for the establishment of a legislative and political environment appropriate for the development and enjoyment of human rights.

48. Namibia was pleased to note the initiatives regarding the Roadmap on Accelerated Reduction of Maternal and Neonatal Deaths and the National Sexual Reproductive Health and Rights Strategy, the passing of the Gender Equality Bill of 2013 and the adoption of the Disability Act in 2012.

49. Nepal commended the adoption of the Disability Act in 2012 and the Gender Equality Act in 2013 and stated that the Gender Equality Act was an important step towards protecting women from harmful traditional practices and other discrimination.

50. The Netherlands welcomed the passing of the Marriage, Divorce and Family Relations Act, however, noted that this law also contained several discriminatory provisions that stigmatized LGBT people and hampered the fight against HIV/AIDS.

51. The delegation stated that Marriage, Divorce and Family Relations Act was passed this year, and was expected to be operational soon. As regards the apparent inconsistency in the age of marriage between this Act and the Constitution, the delegation noted that the Act provides for marriageable age of 18 years. Section 22 (6) of the Constitution provided that persons between the ages of 15 and 18 years may only marry with the consent of their parents. The Constitution also provides that anyone above the 18 years of age will not be prevented from entering into a marriage, a marriageable age which is also prescribed in the Act. The Constitutional provisions allowing for persons between the ages of 15 to 18 years can only be amended through a referendum.

52. The Trafficking in Persons Act, Gender Equality Act, and Disability Act was operational. On the issues of press freedom, the Access to Information Bill was in the process of being finalised. The Bill was soon to be submitted to the Cabinet and will thereafter be placed before Parliament.

53. The delegation emphasised that discrimination against LGBT persons was not only a problem in Malawi. However, the society in Malawi needed to evolve and an informed society will be able to take a decision on this matter. There was a need for discussion and debate on this issue. However, there has not been any attempt by civil society to engage with Government on this issue.

54. The Prisons Act is being reviewed which should be completed later this year. Malawi has the death penalty in its laws, but since 1994 no one has been executed. Society needed to be encouraged to discuss this issue. For those sentenced to death after 1994, some of those sentences were being reviewed. The delegation explained that it was not mandatory for a court to impose the death sentence for murder. The court has the discretion to impose another sentence.

55. Nicaragua acknowledged efforts to protect child rights and the adoption of measures to promote the universal right of children to education. It highlighted the adoption of a comprehensive law on disabilities.

56. Niger noted several institutions which functioned harmoniously and brought about a better protection of human rights, such as the Office of the Ombudsman and Human Rights Commission. Niger also noted that Malawi was party to most of human rights instruments.

57. Nigeria appreciated efforts on the issue of disability and the plan to create wealth through sustainable economic growth. It urged Malawi to continue strengthening its human rights institutions and called on the government to consider extending a standing invitation to special procedures mandate holders.

58. Norway commended the adoption of legislation strengthening the legal framework for human rights protection in Malawi. It noted open discussions on minority rights, action towards decriminalising same-sex relations, and improvements on freedom of expression and the media.

59. The Philippines welcomed progress in harmonizing domestic legislation with international human rights conventions, noting the enactment of the Gender Equality Act and the Child Protection and Justice Act. It lauded awareness raising programmes among government agencies and key sectors of society.

60. Portugal welcomed ratification of the Optional Protocol to CRC on the involvement of children in armed conflict, the adoption of the Gender Equality Act and recognition of the disparities between men and women in the nationality law.

61. Rwanda noted positive action taken since the last review, particularly the adoption of the Disability Act and steps to ensure gender equality through the adoption of the Gender Equality Act, which will change the landscape and empower women.

62. Senegal noted progress made in implementing the recommendations of the first cycle and in the realisation of economic, social and cultural rights. It welcomed efforts in the protection of vulnerable groups, noting the adoption of the Disability Act.

63. Sierra Leone applauded the moratorium on the death penalty and encouraged Malawi to abolish it. It stated that Malawi should consider providing free and equal access to primary education and promote human rights education. It urged Malawi to criminalize all forms of trafficking.

64. Singapore noted the adoption of the Disability Act aimed at providing persons with disabilities with equal opportunities in a number of areas such as healthcare, education and employment. It acknowledged legislative and policy measures to counter gender discrimination.

65. Slovakia noted the adoption of the Trafficking in Persons Law and encouraged the government of fully implement it. It commended steps taken to implement UPR recommendations on children's rights but indicated that further progress was needed in a number of areas.

66. Slovenia welcomed efforts to eliminate harmful practices including child marriage, progress in the juvenile justice system and the raising of the minimum age of criminal responsibility to 12 years. It considered that its previous recommendations 102.37 (on trafficking) and 105.10 (on women) remained valid.

67. South Africa recognized progress in achieving MDGs under Malawi's Vision 2020 and the Malawi Growth and Development Strategy and encouraged further implementation of these initiatives; and to continue efforts towards the promotion of human rights, including the right to development.

68. Spain praised the holding of elections in 2014. It welcomed the fact that no executions had been carried out since 1994 but was concerned that death sentences were still imposed by the courts.

69. Sri Lanka noted remarks by observers on the peaceful holding of elections in 2014. It encouraged Malawi to consider compulsory primary free education for all, with equal access to girls and boys and to improve related infrastructure facilities.

70. The Sudan expressed appreciation for the holding of two peaceful political transition processes in 2012 and 2014. It commended steps undertaken for the protection of human rights, particularly the Disability Act and the establishment of the Disability Trust Fund.

71. Sweden noted that Malawi had adopted some steps to fulfil the gender equality pledges made in 2010 but considered that it had failed to live up to most of them. It noted that in 2010, Malawi had rejected recommendations to decriminalize same-sex conduct.

72. Switzerland recalled its concerns expressed during the first cycle concerning the criminalisation of persons based on their sexual orientation in Malawi's criminal code. It welcomed the new law on trafficking but regretted that it had not yet been enacted.

73. Thailand welcomed the commitment made by the President to enhance women's empowerment and rights as a requisite to poverty reduction. It expressed readiness to support Malawi in the realisation of its socio-economic rights under the framework of the Thai-Africa Initiative.
74. Timor-Leste commended Malawi for the adoption of the National Plan of Action for Orphans and Other Vulnerable Children and encouraged the Government to finalize it. It noted the adoption of a plan of action for human rights education.
75. Togo welcomed the creation of several institutions for the protection of human rights, the adoption in 2012 of a law on persons with disabilities, and efforts to combat harmful traditional practices. It commended action taken on socio-economic development.
76. Trinidad and Tobago noted efforts aimed at law reform designed to bolster support for the protection of human rights as well as initiatives to address disparities in the agricultural sector.
77. Tunisia encouraged Malawi to: increase efforts to implement recommendations accepted in 2010; better enforce recommendations of its national human rights institution; and speed-up the adoption of the action plan to combat violence against children and the bill on family relations.
78. Uganda welcomed the Gender Equality Act but noted that there were still laws that discriminate against women. It urged the government to effectively address concerns about child marriage through the enactment of the Marriage, Divorce and Family Relations Bill. It asked about measures intended to ensure implementation of laws enacted.
79. The United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland encouraged Malawi to implement the Disability and Marriage Acts. It urged the government to ensure the proportionate and appropriate use of firearms by the Police Service and to confirm there is no shoot to kill policy.
80. The United States of America commended the enactment of legislation on gender equality and trafficking. It was concerned at laws that criminalise consensual same-sex activity between adults and urged Malawi to ensure that its legislation respects the rights of all citizens.
81. Uruguay appreciated ratification of OP-CRC-AC and encouraged Malawi to continue its path along this way and ratify ICCPR-OP2, ICESCR-OP, OP-CEDAW, and ICPED, among others. Uruguay welcomed the legislative improvements in terms of gender, particularly, Gender Equality Act.
82. The Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela noted the adoption of the Gender Equality Act and the Disability Act and acknowledged the progress in combating discrimination and violence against women. It also noted that, through the social cash transfer programme, subsidies had been granted to extremely poor homes.
83. Zimbabwe noted measures adopted including human rights education in the Prison Service, work to enact the Marriage, Divorce and Family Relations Bill to address child marriages, steps taken to address child labour, and legislation enacted to enhance human rights.
84. Algeria welcomed the political transition which had taken place since 2012 and the strengthening of Malawi's legal and institutional framework on human rights. It welcomed results obtained through awareness raising efforts of the country's human rights institutions.

85. Angola welcomed the presentation by Malawi of its initial reports under the African Charter on Human and Peoples' Rights and the Maputo Protocol. It appreciated efforts to review legislation and bring it in line with the country's international obligations.
86. Argentina noted the progress achieved in the promotion of human rights, in particular the passage of the Gender Equality Act in 2013 and the Disability Act in 2013, as well as the creation of a national strategic plan on HIV/AIDS 2011-2016. It also noted that since 2010 new HIV infections have fallen by 41 percent.
87. Armenia appreciated the steps taken for the promotion of human rights. It noted the national policies for the protection of the rights of the child and welcomed Malawi's cooperation with the United Nations and its bodies. Armenia expressed concern that Malawi had not ratified the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of Genocide.
88. Australia commended Malawi for the legislative measures to comply with its commitments under ICCPR. It acknowledged steps taken to remove the mandatory death sentence for murder and treasons and was encouraged by the performance of the Malawi Human Rights Commission. Australia noted that the rights of LGBTI groups remained under pressure.
89. Austria expressed concern about the surge in violent attacks against people with albinism. All investigations of those attacks must be in line with international human rights standards. Prison conditions had not improved since the last review. It noted the existence of legislation prohibiting consensual same-sex relations, the reports of harassment and intimidation of journalists and human rights defenders, and the restrictions on the freedoms of assembly and expression.
90. Botswana welcomed efforts to combat child marriages and polygamy. It urged Malawi to finalise the enactment of pending bills and expressed concern about the high number of persons in pre-trial detention, the insufficient resources to address the backlog of court cases, and the restrictions on the freedoms of assembly and expression.
91. Brazil acknowledged the advances made in fostering the alignment of the national law with international human rights obligations and highlighted the adoption of specific legislation on human trafficking.
92. Burkina Faso welcomed the successful organisation of presidential, legislative and local elections in 2014. Burkina Faso was pleased with the interest shown by the authorities on the question of children, regarding the fight against child marriage and the promotion of school enrolment of children.
93. Cabo Verde noted the creation of a climate that was conducive to the promotion of human rights and drew attention to the adoption of the law on gender equality and progress made regarding freedom of information.
94. Canada expressed concern about the continued high prevalence of violence against women and girls, as well as child, early and forced marriage.
95. Chad noted that Malawi was a party to the majority of the regional and international human rights instruments and made efforts aiming to submit its overdue reports. Chad also noted efforts to promote equal opportunities regarding economic and social rights.
96. Chile noted the adoption of the Disability Act and the Gender Equality Act and, extension of the scope of courts in order to improve access to justice, and the successful plan, realized in conjunction with UNAIDS, which strives to cut the number of new HIV infections.
97. China appreciated the efforts taken to implement the recommendations from the 2010 review. It also appreciated, amongst others, the formulation of a national human rights action plan, the adoption of the Disability Act, the Child Care Protection and Justice Act and the Gender Equality Act, and the strengthening of human rights training for the police.

98. The Congo noted with satisfaction the establishment of a juvenile justice system compatible with the Convention on the Rights of the Child. Congo encouraged Malawi to develop a strategy to promote decent work in the sectors of agriculture, domestic work, transport and mining.

99. Costa Rica congratulated the progress relating to freedom of expression and the efforts to prevent the practice of torture in prisons through human rights education for law enforcement officers. It was, however, concerned about violence against women, inequality of women in various fields, child labour and early marriage.

100. Ireland remained concerned at Malawi's high rates of child marriage, maternal mortality and gender based violence. Ireland also noted with concern that women in Malawi were among the poorest and faced specific impediments to their enjoyment of the right to food and nutrition.

101. France welcomed the delegation of Malawi and made recommendations.

102. The delegation stated that it has heard the sentiments, comments and recommendations that had been made and have taken note of all of them. On the issue of early marriage, the delegation stated that the enactment of the Marriage, Divorce and Family Relations Act was a clear statement by the Government to discourage early marriages. By pegging the marriage age to 18 years, the Government has shown its specific intention to address this matter. This Act will encourage girls to go to school before they think of getting married. The national report that had been submitted provided information on the initiatives taken in this regard.

103. With regard to the attacks on people living with albinism, the delegation emphasised that this was a recent issue in Malawi. However, the Government was aware of what was happening and have taken measures to address the issue in order to protect people living with albinism. Those initiatives were supported by the police and traditional leaders.

104. On the issue of loss of citizenship due to marriage, the delegation stated that the Citizenship Act was under review. However, under section 48 of the Marriage, Divorce and Family Relations Act, persons would not lose their citizenship because of marriage.

105. There were no reports in the country of people being persecuted, simply because they were human rights defenders. The delegation welcomed and encouraged mandate holders to visit the country and to find out whether allegations of this nature were credible.

106. The Human Rights Commission was established by the Constitution. The Commission has an A-status accreditation with the ICC. The Commission has always been encouraged to act and carry out its duties independently from the Government. The Government has never made any attempt to interfere with the work of the Commission.

107. Violence against children was a criminal offence. However, in light of the comments and observations that had been made, the Government will review the relevant law to see what else could be done.

108. On the issue of education, the delegation stated that primary education was both free, and compulsory. However enforcement mechanisms were lacking. Steps have been taken to ensure that children went to school.

109. On the issue of prevention of violence against women, the delegation stated that the relevant legislation was currently under review by the Law Commission. By the end of that review, the concerns raised during the interactive dialogue should be addressed.

II. Conclusions and/or recommendations**

110. The following recommendations have been examined by Malawi and enjoy its support:
