Introduction

1. The unstable political situation arising from the coup d'état in 2012 not only affected the population economically and socially but also affected the implementation of policies and measures designed to improve the human rights situation in the country.
2. Despite these constraints, efforts were made to fulfil the obligations arising from the first universal periodic review. With the return to constitutional normality, following the early presidential and parliamentary elections in 2014, the current Government strengthened its political will and its commitment to continuing its efforts to implement the universal periodic review and to mobilizing resources to promote sustainable development policies aimed at poverty eradication, reform of the justice system, consolidation of the rule of law and the promotion and protection of human rights.
3. Guinea-Bissau attaches great importance to the universal periodic review process and enters its second review with a strong sense of its responsibilities and a desire for transparency. It is also aware of the commitments made during its first review in 2010.
4. At the twenty-first session of the Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review in January 2015, Guinea-Bissau received 151 recommendations from the delegations present and decided to delay adopting a position on all the recommendations.
5. After conducting a thorough analysis and consulting its key State and non-State partners, Guinea-Bissau adopted its position on the 151 recommendations, 147 of which it accepts and 4 of which it notes, as set out in the table below.
6. Guinea-Bissau stresses that the recommendations accepted are consistent with the objectives set forth by the new Government in its various programmes and plans.
7. The position of Guinea-Bissau on the recommendations is as follows:
