I. Information provided by other stakeholders

Implementation of international human rights obligations, taking into account applicable international humanitarian law

Right to life, liberty and security of the person

1. The Global Initiative to End All Corporal Punishment of Children (GIEACPC) noted that corporal punishment of children was lawful in Sao Tomé and Príncipe despite recommendations to prohibit it by the Committee on the Rights of the Child and during the 1st cycle UPR of Sao Tome and Principe (which the Government accepted). GIEACPC hoped that the UPR Working Group will note with concern the legality of corporal punishment of children in Sao Tome and Principe.<sup>2</sup>

2. GIEACPC hoped that States will raise this issue during the review in 2015 and make a specific recommendation that Sao Tome and Principe prohibit all corporal punishment of children in all settings including the home and repeal the right to punish children “appropriately and moderately” in the Family Law

3. Sao Tome and Principe was reviewed in the first cycle of the Universal Periodic Review in 2011 (session 10). The issue of corporal punishment of children was raised by the Netherlands, Hungary and Germany, in the compilation of UN information<sup>3</sup> and in the summary of stakeholders’ submission.<sup>4</sup> The following recommendations were made and were accepted by the Government:<sup>5</sup>

“Prohibit corporal punishment by law, protect victims and punish perpetrators (Germany);

“Enact legislation that legally prohibits corporal punishment of children in all settings, including at home and in care institutions (Hungary).”

4. GIEACPC stressed that prohibiting and eliminating all corporal punishment of children in all settings including the home – through law reform and other measures – is a key obligation under the Convention on the Rights of the Child and other human rights instruments. Since the initial UPR of Sao Tome and Principe, a new Penal Code 2012 has been adopted but it does not prohibit all corporal punishment of children. Corporal punishment remains lawful as it was at the time of the initial review in 2011. The Family Law is currently being revised, providing a key opportunity for prohibiting corporal punishment in childrearing.

5. GIEACPC added that the Committee on the Rights of the Child has twice recommended to Sao Tome and Principe that corporal punishment be prohibited in the home and all other settings – in its concluding observations on the initial report in 2004<sup>6</sup> and on the second-fourth report in 2013.<sup>7</sup>
