Introduction

1. The Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review, established in accordance with Human Rights Council resolution 5/1, held its twenty-ninth session from 15 to 26 January 2018. The review of Serbia was held at the 16th meeting, on 24 January 2018. The delegation of Serbia was headed by the Acting Director of the Office for Human and Minority Rights, Suzana Paunović. At its 18th meeting, held on 26 January 2018, the Working Group adopted the report on Serbia.

2. On 10 January 2018, the Human Rights Council selected the following group of rapporteurs (troika) to facilitate the review of Serbia: Belgium, Philippines and Togo.

3. In accordance with paragraph 15 of the annex to Human Rights Council resolution 5/1 and paragraph 5 of the annex to Council resolution 16/21, the following documents were issued for the review of Serbia:

(a) A national report submitted/written presentation made in accordance with paragraph 15 (a) (A/HRC/WG.6/29/SRB/1);

(b) A compilation prepared by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) in accordance with paragraph 15 (b) (A/HRC/WG.6/29/SRB/2);

(c) A summary prepared by OHCHR in accordance with paragraph 15 (c) (A/HRC/WG.6/29/SRB/3).

4. A list of questions prepared in advance by Belgium, Brazil, Czechia, Germany, Liechtenstein, Portugal, Slovenia, Sweden, Switzerland, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and the United States of America and was transmitted to Serbia through the troika. These questions are available on the website of the universal periodic review.

I. Summary of the proceedings of the review process

A. Presentation by the State under review

5. Since the second cycle of the universal periodic review, Serbia had submitted reports to eight United Nations treaty bodies and, in the period under review, had submitted more than 300 reports under the special procedures of the Human Rights Council. It had received visits from the Special Rapporteur on the human rights of internally displaced persons, the Special Rapporteur in the field of cultural rights, the Special Rapporteur on torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment and the Working Group on Enforced or Involuntary Disappearances.

6. Serbia was a candidate country for European Union membership and special attention was being paid to promoting the rule of law and protecting human rights. Serbia cooperated actively with the Council of Europe and with the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe (OSCE) in the field of the protection and promotion of human and minority rights. It had ratified multiple Council of Europe conventions in the field of human and minority rights, including the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms.

7. The United Nations Office in Belgrade and the OSCE Mission to Serbia had provided significant support in the process of drafting the national report for the third review cycle.

8. Serbia had not had the capacity to monitor the implementation of international human rights treaties in the autonomous province of Kosovo and Metohija since the administration of that province had been entrusted to the United Nations Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo.

9. In 2014, the Government of Serbia had established the Council for Monitoring the Implementation of the Recommendations of the United Nations Human Rights Mechanisms. The Council's main goal was to facilitate more effective monitoring of recommendations that were received, and to improve intersectoral cooperation on their implementation. It had developed a plan for the implementation of all recommendations that United Nations human rights mechanisms made to Serbia. The plan for 2018 was to link the implementation of each recommendation from the United Nations mechanisms to the implementation of the Sustainable Development Goals.

10. An adequate legal framework and sufficient resources had been provided for the operation of independent State bodies. In May 2015, the National Assembly had appointed a new Commissioner for the Protection of Equality. The Commissioner's office had moved to larger premises in 2016. A new Protector of Citizens (Ombudsman) had been appointed in July 2017 and the Action Plan for Negotiating Chapter 23 concerning accession to the European Union encompassed measures to strengthen the capacities of the Ombudsman's Office.

11. Training courses in the field of human rights were organized continuously and at all levels, and records were kept on them.

12. The National Judicial Reform Strategy for the period 2013–2018 had been adopted, as had the accompanying action plan. The Government had identified the need to amend the Constitution in relation to the influence exerted by the legislative and executive authorities over the process of the election and dismissal of judges, presidents of courts and public prosecutors, and over the election of members of the High Judicial Council and the State Prosecutors' Council.

13. Serbia had ratified all the most important international instruments on fighting corruption. The National Anti-Corruption Strategy for the period 2013–2018 identified sectors that were considered to be at particular risk of corruption.

14. The National Assembly had elected a new War Crimes Prosecutor on 15 May 2017 and the Government had adopted the National Strategy for the Prosecution of War Crimes for the period 2016–2020. Serbia continued to cooperate with the International Residual Mechanism for Criminal Tribunals as the legal successor to the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991.

15. The definition of torture in the Criminal Code would be amended as part of the process of bringing the Code into accordance with international standards. A higher level of expertise and awareness of the need for zero tolerance of torture would be achieved through continuous training of law enforcement officers, judges and officers responsible for enforcing criminal sanctions. Measures based on the recommendations of the United Nations Committee against Torture and the European Committee for the Prevention of Torture and Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment were being actively implemented.

16. The Penal Sanctions Enforcement System Development Strategy to be enforced by 2020 and the accompanying action plan contained detailed measures for improving prison conditions.

17. Serbia had tackled the migrant and refugee crisis responsibly and had demonstrated its commitment to international and European values and standards. The Migration Profile had been developed as a tool for monitoring migration flows and trends. The Commissariat for Refugees and Migration maintained databases of refugees and internally displaced persons, and records of asylum seekers and migrants who had been placed at the permanent asylum centres and reception centres. All migrants and refugees were provided with appropriate accommodation, with all standards ensured. In addition, social work centres and social security institutions had been instructed to manage emergency accommodation, guardianship of underage migrants and refugees, adequate health care and psychosocial support. Underage migrants and refugees were offered the chance to participate in the formal education system. The adoption in 2014 of the Law on the Employment of Foreigners had constituted a significant development for migrants, refugees and internally displaced persons. Foreigners who were employed according to that law had equal rights and obligations in terms of work, employment and self-employment to those of citizens, if the conditions prescribed by the law were met.

18. The Government had adopted a bill on asylum and temporary protection. It had also adopted the National Strategy for Resolving the Issues of Refugees and Internally Displaced Persons for the period 2015–2020 to tackle the problem of protracted internal displacement. It was implementing the Regional Housing Programme to address the issue of refugees from the former Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia.

19. Serbia was endeavouring to encourage tolerance and intercultural dialogue and to take action to promote mutual respect, understanding and cooperation among all residents, regardless of their national, cultural, linguistic or religious identity. The Constitution stipulated that persons from national minorities could elect national representative councils, which had an advisory role in State bodies. During the 2010 and 2014 electoral cycles, members of the councils of national minorities had been directly elected, making Serbia one of few countries to provide national minorities with the means to elect their representatives. Furthermore, the Action Plan for the Realization of the Rights of National Minorities had been drawn up as a mechanism to ensure the full implementation of the legislative framework and to measure progress in the realization of the rights of national minorities.

20. The adoption of the Strategy for the Social Inclusion of Roma Men and Women 2016–2025 ensured continued provision of a better quality of life for citizens of Roma origin. Given that the Roma experienced more difficulties in finding employment than other sectors of society, active employment policy measures had been put in place for them, along with self-employment incentive programmes and employment subsidies for private sector employers. In the field of housing, records of the number and location of informal Roma settlements in Serbia had been established for the first time, thus allowing for the planned allocation of funds to address the relevant issues.

21. The Government had adopted the National Strategy for Gender Equality 2016–2020 with the accompanying action plan. The National Action Plan for the Implementation of United Nations Security Council resolution 1325 had been adopted in May 2017. The Government had formed the Gender Equality Coordination Body in 2014.

22. Serbia had ratified the Council of Europe Convention on Preventing and Combating Violence against Women and Domestic Violence (the Istanbul Convention) in October 2013. The Serbian Law on Amendments to the Criminal Code and the Law on the Prevention of Domestic Violence had been adopted in November 2016 to ensure alignment with that convention. The Government had established the Council for the Suppression of Domestic Violence to monitor implementation of the Law on the Prevention of Domestic Violence and to eliminate shortcomings that arose in practice.

23. The Government had started working on amendments to regulations that would explicitly prohibit the corporal punishment of children and further improve the provisions of the existing Family Law.

24. Regarding persons with disabilities, the anti-discrimination laws had been supplemented in March 2015 by the Law on the Use of Sign Language and the Law on the Movement of Blind People with the Assistance of Guide Dogs.

25. In accordance with European Union goals for 2022, the National Strategy on Ageing had been introduced into development plans.

26. Since 2014, pride events had been held to promote the rights of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and intersex persons, and the police presence at such events had been gradually reduced.

27. Over 2,000 criminal charges had been brought against persons involved in human smuggling and trafficking. The National Strategy for the Prevention and Suppression of Trafficking in Humans, especially Women and Children, and the Protection of Victims for the period 2017–2022 had been adopted along with the accompanying action plan. A government working group had been set up to implement and monitor the strategy. The capacity of the Criminal Police Directorate to combat human trafficking was being boosted through a specialization programme for inspectors. In addition, a centre providing protection for victims of trafficking had been established, the aim of which was to ensure the best interests and safety of victims and cooperation with social work centres, the police, public prosecutors' offices, courts and citizens' associations.

28. The Serbian Constitution and laws guaranteed the full freedom of the media and prohibited censorship, in accordance with international and European standards. Journalists were accorded the same formal protection under the criminal law as the President of the Republic, the Prime Minister, members of the Government, Constitutional Court judges, judges, public prosecutors, deputy public prosecutors, lawyers and police officers.

29. Under the amendment to the Criminal Code of 2012, consideration was given to whether an act of hatred was committed based on race or religion, national or ethnic affiliation, sex, sexual orientation or gender identity.

30. Serbia remained committed to making further progress in the process of democratization, fulfilment of its international obligations and achievement of the highest standards, especially in the field of human rights.

B. Interactive dialogue and responses by the State under review

31. During the interactive dialogue, 74 delegations made statements. Recommendations made during the dialogue are to be found in section II of the present report.

32. Ireland commended progress on the protection of journalists and freedom of expression. In the light of the persistent homophobia and discrimination against lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and intersex persons, Ireland called on Serbia to make provision in law for same-sex civil partnership and marriage. It noted the difficulties faced by members of minorities in terms of access to education, health care and accommodation, despite efforts to combat discrimination against them.

33. Italy welcomed efforts to promote human rights and the rule of law, including the ratification of the Council of Europe Convention on Preventing and Combating Violence against Women and Domestic Violence. It commended the provision of training on human rights and non-discrimination for public officers, and the commitment of Serbia to combating corruption.

34. Kyrgyzstan welcomed the fact that Serbia had strengthened its national legislative framework, ratified several human rights instruments and adopted policies on human rights.

35. Latvia acknowledged the progress made on respecting human rights, but noted with concern the lack of implementation of the law on gender equality, and the prosecution of journalists and members of civil society.

36. Lebanon commended Serbia for its efforts to promote the human rights of its citizens, combat hate crime and promote tolerance.

37. Maldives welcomed the measures being taken to combat domestic violence and to improve the status of women. It commended the strategy that had been adopted to ensure the rights to a healthy environment, water and sanitation.

38. Mexico acknowledged the establishment of the Council for Monitoring the Implementation of the Recommendations of the United Nations Human Rights Mechanisms, and the Action Plan for the Realization of the Rights of National Minorities.

39. Mongolia praised the legal and institutional progress made on human rights, and the commitment of Serbia to children's rights, including with regard to birth registration and corporal punishment. It encouraged Serbia to implement the Law and the National Strategy on the Prevention of Domestic Violence.

40. Montenegro welcomed the progress Serbia had made in terms of human rights, particularly its strengthened legal framework. It expressed concern about violence against women and domestic violence, while welcoming positive steps that were being taken to tackle those phenomena.

41. Morocco welcomed the ratification by Serbia of the Optional Protocols to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography and on the involvement of children in armed conflict, as well as its acceptance of the amendment to article 20 (1) of the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women. Morocco also welcomed the creation in 2014 of the Council for Monitoring the Implementation of the Recommendations of the United Nations Human Rights Mechanisms.

42. Mozambique praised the efforts of Serbia to implement the previous universal periodic review recommendations and to submit its reports to the treaty bodies. Mozambique noted the continuous efforts being made to include national minorities in society and ensure their access to basic rights.

43. The Netherlands welcomed the comprehensive reform process being undertaken in Serbia, which included ensuring freedom of expression for lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and intersex persons.

44. New Zealand welcomed the delegation of Serbia to the universal periodic review session.

45. Norway stressed that, despite the progress made, more needed to be done to consolidate the rule of law, particularly to strengthen the judiciary. Norway was concerned at the lack of political diversity in the media. It urged Serbia to take further measures to protect against hate crime.

46. The Philippines acknowledged the ratification of the Convention on Jurisdiction, Applicable Law, Recognition, Enforcement and Cooperation in respect of Parental Responsibility and Measures for the Protection of Children, and of the Convention on Protection of Children and Cooperation in respect of Intercountry Adoption. It noted the progress made in terms of improving gender equality and the treatment of marginalized groups.

47. Poland recognized the efforts to comply with the recommendations accepted during the second review cycle and the developments made in combating discrimination, violence against women and corruption.

48. Portugal welcomed the improvements made since the previous review. It commended the progress that had been achieved in the education system, but stressed the need for further developments in that area.

49. The Republic of Korea noted the efforts of the Government to accommodate refugees and unaccompanied children, as well as the reforms to make the institutional and legislative framework more transparent and equitable.

50. The Republic of Moldova welcomed the establishment of the Council for Monitoring the Implementation of the Recommendations of the United Nations Human Rights Mechanisms. It noted that several measures had been taken to ensure gender equality, combat violence against women, and protect the rights of persons with disabilities, children and minorities.

51. Romania applauded the improvements that had been made to the legislative framework regarding the status and participation of persons belonging to national minorities in social and political life, as well as in the implementation of those laws.

52. The Russian Federation appreciated the establishment of the Council for the Implementation of the Recommendations of the United Nations Human Rights Mechanisms and the measures taken to combat discrimination against national minorities, including the national action plan to increase their participation in the work of public institutions and the use of their languages.

53. Sierra Leone acknowledged several measures to ensure gender equality. It encouraged Serbia to adopt a strategy to address domestic violence and to allocate the necessary resources to the Council for the Improvement of the Status of Roma and Implementation of the Decade of Roma Inclusion.

54. Singapore noted several measures that had been taken to promote equal opportunities for minorities. It commended Serbia for its efforts to strengthen the rule of law, including the adoption of the National Strategy for Judicial Reform 2013–2018, and the law on the protection of the right to a fair trial.

55. Slovakia noted with concern reports of intimidation of and attacks and death threats against journalist and media workers. It also noted the results achieved by search operations for persons who had gone missing during the armed conflicts of the 1990s. It further noted the progress made in the protection of the rights of the child.

56. Slovenia applauded measures taken to improve national legislation to combat domestic violence. However, it remained concerned about the persistence of gender-based violence and the high unemployment rate of women. Slovenia encouraged Serbia to strengthen its measures to eradicate social stigmatization, discrimination and violence against members of minorities and vulnerable groups.

57. The State of Palestine noted the establishment of councils for the implementation of non-discrimination policies and of a strategy to protect the rights of the Roma, as well as the adoption of a national action plan on the rights of national minorities.

58. Sweden noted the ongoing efforts of the Government to fulfil its obligations to promote and protect human rights. It encouraged Serbia to continue its efforts in that area.

59. Switzerland noted the adoption of various strategies and laws in line with international human rights standards. However, it was concerned that restrictions were imposed on the right to freedom of expression and opinion of civil society, including human rights defenders and the media.

60. The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia noted the efforts of the Government to implement the recommendations from the previous review cycle. It welcomed the ratification of the Council of Europe Convention on Preventing and Combating Violence against Women and Domestic Violence.

61. Timor-Leste noted the measures taken to address the issue of late birth registration, to improve access to adequate health care and to improve the education system. It remained concerned by the high rates of school non-attendance and dropout.

62. Tunisia noted the participatory approach in drafting the national report by involving all relevant stakeholders and civil society. It also noted the strengthening of the normative and institutional framework of human rights, including the ratification of the Council of Europe Convention on Preventing and Combating Violence against Women and Domestic Violence.

63. Turkey welcomed the adoption of the Action Plan for the Realization of the Rights of National Minorities, stipulating greater participation of national minorities in the Government, the use of their scripts and the protection of their rights to education and culture. It welcomed the adoption of a national strategy for the prosecution of war crimes and the appointment of a new War Crimes Prosecutor in 2017.

64. Turkmenistan noted the establishment of a department of demography and population policy and of the Council for the Implementation of the Recommendations of the United Nations Human Rights Mechanisms. It welcomed the progress made on gender equality, the status of the Roma, persons with disabilities, migrants and national minorities.

65. Ukraine noted the efforts taken by Serbia to improve the institutional and legislative framework on human rights, in particular, through the ratification of international human rights treaties. Ukraine acknowledged the establishment of the Council for the Implementation of the Recommendations of the United Nations Human Rights Mechanisms.

66. The United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland welcomed the efforts of Serbia to tackle human trafficking, particularly the Serbian Assembly's recent partnership with the Human Trafficking Foundation, which was based in the United Kingdom. It was concerned about the protection of freedom of expression and urged Serbia to step up enforcement of its own guarantees for freedom of expression.

67. The United States of America thanked Serbia for its efforts to provide humanitarian assistance to refugees and asylum seekers. It was concerned about threats and violence targeting independent journalists and civil society activists. It remained concerned by the lack of progress in bringing to justice the perpetrators of the 1999 murders of the Bytyqi brothers.

68. Uruguay noted the actions taken by Serbia to combat crimes motivated by prejudice. Uruguay expressed concern that corporal punishment was permitted in the home and in public institutions.

69. The Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela recognized the adoption of the new legal framework aimed at combating all forms of discrimination in Serbia. It noted that the Action Plan for the Realization of the Rights of National Minorities provided greater opportunities for the participation of minorities in the work of the Government.

70. Viet Nam noted that Serbia had put in place numerous measures to promote and protect human rights, particularly for women and children, persons with disabilities and elderly persons. Viet Nam welcomed the achievements of Serbia in the field of gender equality.

71. Afghanistan commended the action taken by Serbia towards gender equality and the efforts of the Coordination Body for Gender Equality to improve the status of women.

72. Albania commended Serbia for its ratification, since the second review cycle, of significant international human rights instruments, including the Istanbul Convention. Albania welcomed the reform of the domestic legal framework with a view to strengthening institutional capacities and media freedom and improving respect for human rights.

73. Algeria noted that Serbia had ratified several regional legal instruments and harmonized its domestic law with international human rights treaties. Algeria welcomed the measures adopted by Serbia within the framework of its 2016 national human rights plan and the establishment of the Council for the Implementation of the Recommendations of the United Nations Human Rights Mechanisms.

74. The delegation of Serbia, responding to some of the statements that had been made, said that the independent State bodies had been fully supported politically and financially from the national budget between the two review cycles. In fact, they had benefited significantly from increased funding.

75. Regarding the transparency of media ownership, a media registry has been established under the Law on Public Information and Media. Civil society organizations participated in the formulation and amendment of provisions of the Constitution and in public debates.

76. The delegation stated that Serbia had adopted the National Strategy for the Prosecution of War Crimes and cooperated diligently with the International Residual Mechanism for Criminal Tribunals, the legal successor to the International Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia. Regarding victims' right to compensation, Serbia planned to draft a national strategy on improving the rights of victims of crime.

77. Legislative solutions to uphold the rights of national minorities had been implemented based on the laws on employment in public service and on employees in autonomous provinces and local self-government units. There were 21 national minority councils active in Serbia and over 300 million dinars (around €2.5 million) were allocated annually to their work from the budget of Serbia and the Autonomous Province of Vojvodina.

78. The delegation stated that the Law on Public Assembly stipulated that public gatherings could be enjoyed freely and that everyone had the right to organize a gathering and to participate in it, in accordance with that law. Assembly was not allowed, however, in a place where, due to the characteristics of the site itself or its special purpose, it would pose a danger or a threat to the safety of persons, property, public health, morals, the rights of others or State security.

79. The delegation of Serbia stated that a situational analysis and analysis of the existing legal framework for the protection of children from the worst forms of child labour had been undertaken and a proposal had been made to amend several laws. In May 2017, the Government had adopted a decree on the list of dangerous jobs for children and the worst forms of child labour.

80. Argentina congratulated Serbia for the establishment of the Council for the Implementation of the Recommendations of the United Nations Human Rights Mechanisms. It congratulated Serbia on the inclusion of article 54 in the Criminal Code regarding hate crimes. Argentina recognized the commitment of Serbia to fighting impunity.

81. Armenia commended Serbia for its ratification of a number of international human rights instruments. Armenia welcomed the increased efforts being made by Serbia to combat trafficking in persons and discrimination against women, and its efforts to promote gender equality. It appreciated the measures being taken by the Coordination Body for Gender Equality.

82. Australia commended Serbia for its efforts to advance the rights and protection for lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and intersex persons and noted that the 2017 pride parade had taken place without incident. It noted that Serbia did not have comprehensive legislation in place to protect the rights of intersex persons in terms of equality and non-discrimination.

83. Austria commended the efforts Serbia had made to improve its legislative and institutional framework. Austria noted that corporal punishment of children and domestic violence remained an issue, and that Roma, lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and intersex persons, persons with disabilities and other vulnerable groups continued to face discrimination in Serbia.

84. Azerbaijan appreciated the solid commitment of Serbia to the universal periodic review process and its active engagement with the treaty bodies and special procedures of the Human Rights Council. It commended the establishment of the Council for the Implementation of the Recommendations of the United Nations Human Rights Mechanisms and noted with interest the legislative and institutional changes that had been made in order to better promote human rights.

85. Belarus welcomed the strategic approach being taken on gender equality issues, including the implementation of the National Strategy for Gender Equality and its plan of action, and the establishment of the Coordinating Council on Gender Equality. It noted with interest the steps being taken to implement the recommendations of the United Nations human rights mechanisms.

86. Belgium recognized the positive steps that had been taken to implement the recommendations from the previous review cycle, particularly the progress made in tackling human trafficking. Belgium was convinced that further progress could be achieved in the fight against impunity and hate crime and to uphold freedom of expression.

87. Bhutan praised Serbia on its ratification of the Istanbul Convention and for the amendments it had made to domestic legislation, particularly on combating domestic violence. Bhutan wished Serbia success in its implementation of the National Strategy for the Prevention and Suppression of Trafficking in Human Beings and the National Anti-Corruption Strategy.

88. Bosnia and Herzegovina noted with appreciation the steps taken to strengthen the normative framework on the prevention of domestic violence and to fight human trafficking. It asked Serbia to provide more information on the assistance given to victims of trafficking under the National Strategy for the Prevention and Suppression of Trafficking in Human Beings.

89. Brazil congratulated Serbia for adopting the Law on the Prevention of Domestic Violence and for progress in protecting the rights of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and intersex persons. Brazil encouraged Serbia to continue fighting homophobia and discrimination by implementing the anti-discrimination law. It expressed concern about the situation of migrants and refugees and people at risk of statelessness.

90. Bulgaria welcomed steps to improve the normative and institutional framework regarding the status of national minorities and their equal participation in political and social life. It encouraged Serbia to provide radio and television broadcasting in Bulgarian for the Bulgarian national minority.

91. Canada commended Serbia for the steps it had taken to uphold human rights, particularly the rights to freedom of assembly and of expression. It expressed concern about the Serbian Defence Minister's public praise of Vladimir Lazarević, who had been convicted of war crimes.

92. Chile congratulated Serbia for ratifying the Council of Europe Convention on Preventing and Combating Violence against Women and Domestic Violence and for adopting policies aimed at eliminating discrimination against women, persons with disabilities, lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and intersex persons, migrants, refugees and national minorities.

93. China commended Serbia for its efforts to ensure economic and social development and gender parity, to enhance living standards, education and health care, to combat domestic violence and to protect the rights of women, children, persons with disabilities and the Roma.

94. Costa Rica congratulated Serbia for ratifying several international human rights instruments and for approving domestic legislation to combat discrimination against minorities. It expressed concern about the low prosecution rates for crimes committed during the armed conflict and for cases of discrimination and domestic violence.

95. Côte d'Ivoire welcomed the implementation of the national human rights plan and the establishment of the Council for the Implementation of the Recommendations of the United Nations Human Rights Mechanisms. It was concerned at reports of alleged human rights violations of the rights of members of civil society and of discrimination against women.

96. Croatia acknowledged developments in preventing hate speech, hate crimes and discrimination, and urged Serbia to implement the action plans it was developing within the framework of the European Union accession process. Croatia expressed regret that the prosecutorial strategy for the investigation and prosecution of war crimes had not been adopted, leaving victims of war crimes without adequate compensation.

97. Cuba welcomed the adoption of the National Strategy for Gender Equality 2016–2020 and the 2020 Education Strategy, and the entry into force of the Law on the Prevention of Domestic Violence.

98. Cyprus commended Serbia for amending the Criminal Code regarding rape, stalking, sexual harassment, forced marriage and genital mutilation. Cyprus welcomed the establishment of and the activities undertaken by the Coordination Body for Gender Equality.

99. Czechia thanked Serbia for its responses to some of its advance questions. It acknowledged the progress made by Serbia on several areas of human rights and encouraged it to continue on that path.

100. Egypt appreciated the adoption of the Action Plan for the Realization of the Rights of National Minorities, which provided for greater participation of national minorities in the Government.

101. Estonia appreciated the cooperation of Serbia with the United Nations procedures and bodies and highlighted the need for protection of freedom of expression and the pluralism of the media. Estonia expressed regret at reports that girls and women were frequently exposed to violence and alleged cases of violence against children, child trafficking and the commercial sexual exploitation of children.

102. France welcomed progress in several areas, such as legislation on gender equality.

103. Gabon highlighted the measures taken to promote gender equality and to protect persons with disabilities, migrants, refugees and national minorities. Gabon welcomed measures aimed at providing independent human rights mechanisms with a legal framework, sufficient financing and efficient administration.

104. Georgia welcomed the establishment of the Council for the Implementation of the Recommendations of the United Nations Human Rights Mechanisms. Georgia encouraged Serbia to strengthen its legal framework to provide for more effective prevention of all forms of violence against women.

105. Germany highlighted the need to strengthen the rule of law, and stated that legislation to improve the situation of migrants, refugees and minorities should be effectively implemented. It noted the backlog with regard to the prosecution of crimes under international law.

106. Greece commended legal steps taken to tackle the issue of hatred, intolerance, racial discrimination and discrimination against lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender persons. Greece welcomed the adoption of the Action Plan for the Realization of the Rights of National Minorities, which provided for greater participation of national minorities in the Government.

107. Honduras commended the adoption in 2016 of the Law on the Prevention of Domestic Violence and the amendments made to the provisions of the Criminal Code on non-consensual sexual relations, including harassment and forced marriage.

108. Iceland welcomed the efforts made by Serbia to promote the right to peaceful assembly of lesbian, bisexual, transgender and intersex persons. It also welcomed the adoption in 2016 of the Law on the Prevention of Domestic Violence and the amendments to the provisions of the Criminal Code on rape and non-consensual sexual relations, stalking, sexual harassment, forced marriage and genital mutilation.

109. India commended Serbia for the steps taken to improve the status of women and promote gender equality and for the adoption of the National Strategy for Gender Equality 2016–2020. In addition, it welcomed the enactment of laws on the prevention of discrimination against persons with disabilities and the adoption of the Action Plan for the Realization of the Rights of National Minorities.

110. Indonesia expressed appreciation for the ratification by Serbia of international human rights instruments and welcomed the convening of numerous human rights training sessions for government officials in the field of human rights protection and anti-discrimination.

111. Iraq welcomed the institutional framework established to follow up on the implementation of recommendations in the field of human rights.

112. The delegation of Serbia concluded by reiterating that Serbia had demonstrated its commitment to the protection of human rights by the manner in which it had prepared for and participated in the third cycle of the universal periodic review. The best illustration of that claim was the strengthening of institutional capacities in preparation for the process, the improvement of the reporting process itself, the involvement of all relevant domestic stakeholders in the preparations for the third review cycle, and the high level of cooperation that had been achieved among the different stakeholders. Serbia would strive in the future to link the process of reporting to the United Nations human rights mechanisms with the Sustainable Development Goals. Serbia remained committed to the universal periodic review process and to cooperating with the Human Rights Council.

II. Conclusions and/or recommendations
