We understand the right to life as being the full enjoyment of Life,
as being the right not to be killed,
but also as everyone's responsibility not to kill or let others die.

The Center for Global Nonkilling has a unique mission, inspirational for individuals and transformative for societies:
“To promote change toward the measurable goal of a killing-free world by means open to infinite human creativity in reverence for life”.

Introduction

The Center for Global Nonkilling (CGNK) was founded by Glenn Paige (1929-2017), political science Professor and author of the book “Nonkilling Political Science”, translated in numerous languages¹. The Center is a worldwide congregation of committed individuals, scholars and groups working at creating societies that do not kill. Valuing life in all its worthwhile dimensions is a necessary mission; please join the Center for Global Nonkilling in celebrating, enhancing and protecting life². The Center has ECOSOC special consultative status since 2014. At each session of the UPR, CGNK makes usually one as comprehensive as possible submission and a few shorter ones focusing on specific issues³. This is a short submission, focusing mainly on international legal aspects of the right to life.

Human rights

All human rights are universal, of equal importance, indivisible, interlinked and mutually reinforcing. They arise out of our fundamental human nature and are expressed by our feelings and thoughts. They grow and remain through knowledge, practice and kindness. They are needed to build lasting and prosperous, thriving and humane societies and to enable each and every one to lead a fulfilling life. They are universal values, human and legal values.

They are supported and implemented by universal and fundamental methods such as education the culture of peace, prevention and precaution, peaceful settlements of disputes and non-violence. These methods are fully needed for the full respect, the common enjoyment and the achievement of all human rights.

The right to life

Compared to other human rights, the right to life has four specific features:

a. If dignity can be said to be the paramount human right as it is present when each and all human rights are fulfilled, so is the right to life present within all other human rights. However, the right to life precedes all other human rights: if life is taken all human rights are cancelled⁴.

Conversely, joyfully granting and giving solid ground to life and to the right to life, to the quality and equality of life is the base needed for the peaceful progress, the proactive fulfillment and the completion of all human rights.

b. There are no possible limitations or restrictions to the right to life: one is either alive or not. Issues pertaining to the beginning and to the end of life such as reproductive rights, abortion, suicides and euthanasia as well as prenatal and genetic engineering should thus be dealt with in a preventive, humane and human sustainable manner, for each and all, in full dignity.

c. There is only one way to guarantee the respect of, to protect the right to life: full and effective prevention. Once a life is lost, compensation may be due, but there are no possible reparations for that lost life.

d. Henceforth, the right to life is also the duty not to kill. As such, the right to life is a fully reciprocal right granted to all and in need of being granted by all to all, individually as collectively.

The Center for Global Nonkilling recognises no right to kill and encourages all persons and institutions to do likewise.

Though not rights, three powers to kill have sometimes been legally granted (or remain), under very strict circumstances. We do not approve or condone these existing powers. They should be made into what they often already are, unwanted remnants of the past. They are:

1) The use of legitimate self-defence by a proportionate reaction linked to a direct, serious and imminent threat, as legally required. These circumstances where self-defence could be needed are a failure of prevention. If they nevertheless occur, using nonviolent means, they should never result in acts of killing or maiming. Thereafter, whatever the result of legitimate defence may be, an independent judicial control over it is part of the rule of law.

2) Similarly, because it highly impacts on the rights to life and to personal integrity, any use of force by officials or by any one as it also impedes on the right to security, should be avoided or highly limited. We recall that States have a duty of exemplarity regarding fundamental value and respect of human rights. Outmost attention is therefore to be given to prevent situations which may thereafter result in loss or losses of lives or in any type of maiming. Failures of prevention shall be regularly monitored to extract lessons learned and instigate changes in policies. Methods used when the use of force is required and legitimate should be inspired by non-violent techniques as used by civil society: force is not violence as long as it causes no harm. Again, any official use of force should be monitored by a totally independent mechanism. We encourage the creation of police complaint courts, having investigative and decisional powers, yet being totally separated from the police and public ministries.

Death penalty, if ever permissible, is however a major and definitive breach of the right to life and of numerous other human rights. More often than not, it is also considered as an inhumane, cruel and degrading treatment⁵. It is the worst example of respect for the right to life a State and a nation can give and thus, unworthy and lacking the necessary dignity, moral standards and exemplarity required of any authoritative power.

Death penalty is not compatible with the Sustainable Development Goals (SDG) as these grant universal development (to leave no one behind): development for all. The SDGs unanimously adopted, also require “significant reduction of violence and related killings (SDG 16.1)”: it includes State killings.

3) Powers of war, as conceded by humanitarian law permit, as an exception to the right to life and under certain circumstances only, the taking of the life of soldiers. Seeing peace and respect of life prevail – always – and thus nullifying this exception is one of the objectives of the Center for Global Nonkilling and shall be a purpose for humanity, for the sake of life as for the sake of peace.

The right to peace

Peace originates in our human nature. No life would be possible without a sufficient attainment of peace and dignity can only be fully achieved when peace and human rights prevail. Peace is a right but it is also a method, a universal method needed for the completion of all human rights.

Peace is fully present in article 28 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights when it States that “Everyone is entitled to a social and international order in which the rights and freedoms set forth in this Declaration can be fully realized”, as it is only through a peaceful order that such an endeavour can be accomplished: all rights set forth in the declaration being fully realized.

The links between human rights and peace are progressively being developed⁶. It is with great respect that we salute the fact that Grenada has supported in 2016 the adoption of the Declaration on the Right to Peace⁷. It is time to implement it⁸.

Henceforth, peace and peaceful methods provide means to prevent and solve conflicts without aggravating them (including between competing human rights) and as may be to the advantage of all concerned, in a constructive or reconstructive way. Conflicts solved peacefully make it easier to alleviate feelings with respect, to draw lessons learned from difficult situations and to design policies for future prevention and overcoming.

Other related human rights

All human rights are needed to fulfil a safe and happy life. However, some of them may be of more direct importance either for the full realisation of the rights to life and to peace, or to avoid their breach.

The right to participation, including of women, youth and disabled persons is important. It creates societies where responsibilities are shared, for the progress of all towards well-being. The more people participate in the decision making process, the more will they respect the consequences of their decisions and the easier it will be to achieve SDG 16: safe and inclusive societies.

The right to accurate standards of living, including the rights to food, water and sanitation, clothing and housing, to work and social security deserve full attention too, in all circumstances.

The right to health is an essential right for the fulfilment of the right to life and of the subsequent right to longevity. It is needed as well to achieve societies in which human rights are all equally shared.

The human right to a healthy natural environment, thus sustaining humanity and life on Earth, deserves accurate protection and attention as well.

The right to happiness and to fulfilment, in reverence for life, should always be mentioned:

“Happy people breed a happy world”.

Universal Periodic Review of Grenada

We wish a happy UPR to the people and the country of Grenada.

The international human rights constitution

The following legal obligations – the convention on the prevention and punishment of the crime of genocide, the covenant on civil and political rights and its optional protocol on the abolition of the death penalty, and the convention on enforced disappearances – are, within the human rights constitution (basic treaties), the ones mostly concerned with the right to life. They are the minimum international standards needed for any country to show full legal respect for life and for the right to life. National constitutions shall reflect this human and legal stand in favor of life.

Beyond legal aspects, it is consciously evident that it is the bounty of life, the ethics, the knowledge and the human best practices, strong heart feelings and our well understood instincts, our good will: it is what we offer to each other and to humanity for life, living well and living means and it is what our institutions promote and exemplify to pursue progress in dignity and to achieve a sustainable civilization on Earth; so forth it is our personal and collective commitments that give a future, a meaning and a worth to the lives we lead and live, leaving no one behind, for ourselves as for future generations.

Prevention of genocide

The right to live is also to duty not kill, for individuals and inasmuch for groups of people. Every person needs life and needs to be part of a social group to live, to be part of a society and to relate with its government, ideally all thriving for the good of each and all. Therefore all individuals as well as all social and political groups should be protected against genocide.

We recall, that the United Nations Special Adviser of the Secretary-General on the Prevention of Genocide has called, for the 70th anniversary of the Convention, on the 9th of December 2018 for its universal ratification⁹. We also recall that the Human Rights Council has adopted, without a vote at its session 37 in March 2018, a resolution containing a similar call¹⁰.

The fact that they are various minority groups in Grenada makes the ratification of the Convention on the prevention and punishment of the crime of genocide all more valuable and urgent.

Nothing in the political or strategic situation of a country can justify the absence of the needed tools for the prevention of genocide and atrocity crimes. However such a measure as the ratification of the convention may seem to be a light commitment, it is a clear sign that such crimes will never be tolerated and a head start for long term policies, as such an overall measure preceding or accompanying other measures and policies. More than not as tools and initiatives are now available for prevention¹¹.

I. Hereupon, we strongly urge and recommend to the authorities of Grenada the ratification of the Convention on the prevention and punishment of the crime of genocide.

Prohibition of the death penalty

To respect life is to value all lives, without distinction or discrimination.

The act of killing is the same, be it official or a crime. States have the duty to stand as examples of respect for life and for the right to life. We recall that the right to life granted to all is also the responsibility vested in all to refuse to kill. Accepting that one could be killed or to kill one is accepting the act of killing; as such, regardless of who is killed, how many are killed or why there is a kill.

Death penalty is still present in the Constitution of Grenada.

Worse, the constitution largely permits the taking of life in cases of arrest, escape, riot, insurrection, mutiny and to prevent the criminal offences (article 2)¹². The use of force, preferably of nonkilling, non-maiming and non-violent force, is to be avoided or highly limited in all circumstances. Instead of being permitted and an exception to the right life, in all occurring cases, it should be restricted and subject to a strict totally independent control. The constitution of Grenada is too wide, sending a wrong message about the imperative protection of life and of the right to life, by all.

We recall that States have a duty of exemplarity regarding fundamental values and respect of human rights, specifically here the right to life and the duty not to kill.

II. We urge the People and the Authorities of Grenada to change the constitution and to enhance life and its full value therein.

Grenada has not executed any convict since 1978. It is thus considered as an abolitionist country in practice.

III. We urge the People and the Authorities of Grenada to abolish the death penalty and thereafter, we recommend the swift ratification of protocol II of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights aiming at the abolition of the death penalty.

Illegality of enforced disappearances

To be granted a life is also receiving a right to a presence, to a public presence before the law and to a private presence, or an acknowledgeable presence with and for one's kin.

As such enforced disappearances violate numerous human rights, be them in law or in jus cogens. As need be, we will recall that there is an unanswered invitation of the Working Group on Enforced or Involuntary Disappearances to visit the country. There is, as know of today, N/no cases of enforced disappearances listed by the working group¹³.

IV. Henceforth, we hereby recommend to the State of Grenada to urgently ratify the Enforced Disappearances Convention and if not yet done, to answer the allegation sent by Working Group on Enforced or Involuntary Disappearance.

Welcoming the delegation of Grenada
To Geneva, the city of peace,

³ For more comprehensive analysis, see the ones recently done for the UPR's of Costa Rica or Mauritius. Such submissions look at all legal aspects of the right to life and at many practical aspects of a fulfilling and lasting life, including in relation with the Sustainable Development Goals. Statistics are used therein to uphold the Universal Periodic Review process regarding the fulfilment of life from conception until death, including inter alia reproductive rights and abortions, birth registrations, child and mother's mortality, suicides of all sorts and homicides, traffic, work and leisure casualties and life expectancy. Other topics such deaths in custody, minimal standards of living and other applications of the right to life may be added as accurate for the enhancement, the enjoyment and the protection of life and of the right to life.

Rights to health, minimum standards of living, a healthy environment and peace, all deeply related to the right to life, are studied as needed or according to available means

⁴ The Human Rights Committee, in its draft comment 36 (2015) on the right to life describes it this way: "It is the supreme right from which no derogation is permitted. The right to life has profound importance both for individuals and for society as a whole. It is most precious for its own sake, but also serves as a basic right, facilitating the enjoyment of all other human rights". <http://www.ohchr.org/EN/HRBodies/CCPR/Pages/GC36-Article6Righttolife.aspx>
